Mr. Hal Morrison and His Winter in the Land of Flowers---Porter Woodson a Crack Shot.

ANDS of wonderful beauty, with tropic-tinted profusion of plant life, lakes and rivers and mirror-like skies, sandy beaches and marsh prairies, and over all the glamour and glory of eternal sunshine—

The profligate loveliness of the country, its infinity of beauty, have made it—and within a few years—the Mecca of artist souls all over

A coarser appreciation of it is bringing the tourist end sportsman, and every year, as the country is better known, the crowds of visitors to tourists as are many other points. The trains go there only three days in a week, and the natives haven't stopped gossiping yet over the arrival of a stranger.

Ask one of them what's the outlook for the

"I don't know."

And the average tourist would probably go back to his hotel, disappointed, to wait for the next train home.

But that's a sportsman's paradise. About its beauty, Mr. Hal Morrison, the artist, said yesterday: "It's bewildering, it's intoxicating. Florida is the most beautiful country on earth, and that's the most beautiful part of Florida."

Mr. Morrison ought to know. He has just returned from a five-months' visit there, has trunks full and bundles of studies, and they corroborate very forcibly his description of the Willets, marsh hens, summer ducks, puddle ducks, bull necks, the female summer ducks, Florida gallinnel, Scotch heads, goosander, quail old squaws, canvass-back ducks, snipe, pin tails, and other native types.

Mr. Morrison is something of a taxidermist, as well as an artist, and quite a number of specimens of the rarer species were brought back in his collection.

"The Florida gallinnel," said he, "is found In only two places on earth. One is in Louis-lana and the other in Florida. There is no existing species that is closely akin to it, and those found now perhaps are the remnant of a nearly extinct kind."

Ben Willett is a popular name for a kind found in abundance—"so called," the artist explains, "from its piping call. They say 'Ben Willett! Ben Willett!' like the par-Another very pretty bird is known amongst

"One thing I learned long ago," he said yes terday, "is this-that the Creator's models are best. For that reason I never 'block out' a study, and trust my memory or imagination to fill it out afterwards. A true artist will not content himself with copying models, for there are imperfections in the best work, and in copying a model you copy the faults in the model and add faults of your own, getting farther and farther from nature.

"No man can paint a great picture from his imagination. The man that painted 'Christ in the Jordan' was eleven years in securing his models. He had the picture all in his mind, but didn't dare paint from that. The picture was completed before the picture of Christ was put in. He traveled hundreds of miles looking

BILL ARP'S PHILOSOPHY.

"What constitutes a state?" We all know that and can answer the peet, but what consti-tutes a town or city? I was ruminating over this while cruising around Americus in the electric car. Three years ago I was in Americus and it was a nice little town of three thou-sand people, and now it has daily papers and electric street cars, and waterworks, and gas-works, and an ice factory, and oil mills, and compresses, and a cotton factory, and furni-ture factory, and planing mills, and a brick plant that makes fifty thorsand a day and her plant that makes fifty thousand a day, and has plant that makes fifty thousand a day, and has many other industries, and the population has increased to 9,000 people, and there is a splendid new court-house that is paid for, and an opera-house, and they are building a hundred thousand dollar hotel. Beautiful dwellings have been erected all along the electric line, and everywhere you go there are signs of thrift and prosperity. There are fifty men in Americus who are worth fifty thousand dollars and over, and they range as high as half a million. There are four banks and an investment company, with half a million capital, and the stock is worth $300 a share.

What did all this? Who did it, and how was it done? Every aspiring town in the state would like to know. It is said that agriculture is the basis of all prosperity, but the lands of Sumter county are no richer than they used to be, nor do they produce any more cotton, or corn, or oats to the acre. What has given such a stimulus to Americus?

There is a good old maxim that "heaven helps those who help themselves. Colonel Evan Howell came to our town two for that model, and finally found him. He had in his mind an image of the face he wanted, but he waited to paint from nature.

"My experience in Atlanta has impressed upon me that the people here appreciate beau-ty-as fully and critically as the people of Boston or any other place. I have declined numer ous offers that would take me away from here, for the simple reason that I wouldn't leave Atlanta. From here I have sold pictures to San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, and sold two to Europe. In three hours one afternoon I sold $1,500 worth of paintings right here in Atlanta. When you hear an artist complain about. Atlanta being unappreciative and all that, you may be sure the fault is in the artist

A SONG OF TRUST.

Like some poor, wounded bird, that flies For shelter to the mother-nest, My bleeding heart for refuge hies, Dear Savior! to Thy loving breast; However dark the night may grow, A light for me shines from above, However stormy winds may blow, I find a haven in Thy love.

With child-like faith, that knows no fear, Do I pursue my pilgrim way,

For, with my Heavenly Father near,

How can I ever go astray?

Though gathering clouds the sun obscure,

And dark the way, the prospect wild,

I journey onward—God, I'm sure, Will not forsake His trusting child. My Lord, my Comfort, my Defense,

My Hope, my everlasting Trust! And lay my body in the dust; Content am I to follow Thee— In life or death, Thy will is mine; -CHARLES W. HUBNER.

The very evening of the receipt of the letter the father informed the circuit officials, as well as the royal council, whereupon dispatches were sent to Berlin to effect the final release of the poor fellow.

NINETEEN YEARS A PRISONER. A Frenchman Who Spent All This Time in Slavery.

Recently Christoph Daniel's family and friends in the village of Greisentein were in a state of great agitation as well as the most heartfelt joy. They had a son who had been wounded at Grave-lotte in the war of 1870. The parents had received a certificate of his death, saying that he had died on the 21st of August. To the great joy of parents and friends this death notice has proven false. Lately the parents received a letter from their son Henry in Algiers. This was the very one they thought had died nineteen years before. Henry Daniel relates in his letter that he had

and given to a plantation owner as a present. There he worked for nineteen years as a slave and suffered the most cruel treatment; meat was thrown to him-raw; he had no clothing on his body since 1870. He said that he had made six attempts to escape, having failed every time. Finally, when the plantation owner was dead and buried, his escape was successful. Three days and three nights he was in his flight, until he fell exhausted and tired out.

In the city in which he fell he was cared for and concealed at the time of his writing a letter home by German trades-people. This had been the first chance he had of sending any notice to his parents. The sen heartily begged his parents to have him set free.

years ago, and told our people that same old thing, and recited one of old Æsop's fables, about the partridge and her young ones in the wheat field, and how the young birds were alarmed when they heard the farmer say he was going to invite the neighbors to come and cut his wheat the next day, but the old bird wasn't alarmed at all, for she knew that the neighbors were not coming. Our Cartersville people are still waiting for the neighbors, but these Americus people have acted on that good old maxim, and they had a leader, who opened a school and took in the whole community as scholars. I verily believe that if Colonel Hawkins had not lived in Americus the town would have been what it was three years ago. A progressive leader is a great boon to a town. Colonel Hawkins built a little railroad about fifty miles long and wouldn't let it connect with anything, but stopped it in the woods; and he built it without capital or bonds or syndicates or state aid, but he built it, and it brought trade to the town that it had never had before and general the state with anything to a state aid, but he built it as the total these woods; and he built it without capital or bonds or syndicates or state aid, but he built it and it brought trade to the town that it had never had before and gave it a start, and then he organized various improvement companies and built another railroad, and everything he touched prospered, and the people got to believing that he couldn't make a mistake and they followed his lead, and very soon his spirit of enterprise infused the whole community, and now when anything new is started the first inquiry is, "What does Colonel Hawkins think about it?" or, "Is Colonel Hawkins think about it?" or, "Is Colonel Hawkins in it?" and that is all they want to know. His lucky star is still in the ascendant. He has made no blunders. He has built over three hundred miles of railroad, and they all point to Americus. He is now worth half a million of dollars, and nobody has suffered. Nobody is worth any less because he is worth more. He has added to values. He has increased the taxable property of Sumter county not less than three million dollars in the last five years. Towns have characters, just like individuals. The young men of Americus have more life and more business enterprise than any I know of. They don't loaf around in the day nor go to the billiard saloon at night. They are all doing something, and have a good bank account. It is not popular to be doing nothing in that town. The fathers and mothers are happy because their children are doing well. My wife says the ladies don't put on any style, but are home-like and kind and social, and can walk a quarter of a mile to church or to pay a visit. That is splendid. All I want to know about a a quarter of a mile to church or to pay a visit. That is splendid. All I want to know about a woman is that she has to have the carriage and horses and driver brought out to take her to the church that is only two or three hundred yards away. Southwestern Georgia is looking up. Her fertile lands and delightful climate are attracting farmers and visitors more than ever before. Good farming lands are in demand all over the south. Shortly after the war the vankees gave us a bureau for are in demand all over the south. Shortly after the war the yankees gave us a bureau for refugees and abandoned lands, but that bureau has been transferred to Vermont. The truth is that good farming is a paying business at the south. Mr. McLendon's careful examination of the tax returns proves beyond all question that the farmers of Thomas county are prospering. I have but little patience with all this buncombe talk about the poor down-tredden, oppressed farmer. Industrious farmers are doing as well as any tradesmen or profession that I know of. Of course some of them are in debt and have a hard time getting out, but we must remember that there are three times as many farmers as that there are three times as many farmers as that there are three times as many farmers as all the other occupations combined, and there are not three times as many failures. At least half the lawyers and doctors and dentists and school-teachers and preachers and editors are struggling for a meagre living, and so are the carpenters and masons and blacksmiths. We advertised for a superintendent of our public schools, and there were forty-nine applicants. Look at the thousands of young men who are clerking for just enough to feed and clothe them, and there are thousands more who can't get any employment at all. These are the town boys and college boys—the very ones the farmer boys are envious of. What good does all this fuss about the tariff do the farmer? Of course the tariff needs reform, but how can the government go on without a tariff, and a pretty high one at that.

Two years ago there was a surplus, but there is none now 2nd haver will be exercise. do the larmer? Octores the tariff needs reform, but how can the government go on without a tariff, and a pretty high one at that. Two years ago there was a surplus, but there is none now, and never will be again while the pension trainess goes on and increases from year to year. I wonder if any sane man does expect the government to build a thousand warehouses for the farmers to store their cotton and corn and produce in, and appoint the officials, and then advance money on their crops so that the farmer may hold for a higher price. If the like of that is to be done it seems to me we ought to wait for the democrats to get in power again, so that all these new offices could be filled by them. I wonder if any farmer is banking his hopes on such a Utopian scheme. I see that one of the high officials in the alliance tells the farmers that this scheme would enable them to hold their cotton until it got to fifteen cents a pound. A year or so ago they passed a resolution at Macon to hold for twelve and a half cents, but they didn't hold. Fifteen cents would be right big trust, wouldn't it. There are less than a million people engaged as landlords and tenants in the production of cotton in the south. What will the other twenty millions of our people say to an increase of fifty per cent on their cotton goods? What will the consumers and the poor of all countries say to it? There is a monument in London to Richard Cobden, and the epitaph is, "He gave the poor cheap bread," but the epitaph of some of these leaders would be, "He gave the poor dear clothing." I heard a good farmer say that raising cotton at ten cents per pound was a profitable business, and that any prudent, industrious man could get rich at it. It has averaged ten cents for the past ten years. Corn is bringing sixty cents a bushel here in Cartersville, and a good many farmers have it to sell. Their sweet potatoes have brought ends and eggs and pork and mutton are always in demand. Then what is the matter, and where are the oppressed and distressed farmers? They are not in this region, and the Americus people told me they were not in that region. That old song of "Hark! Hark! the dogs do bark," The beggars are coming to town," does not fit this blessed country. A thought ful little girl, whose parents have recently moved here from the north, asked a visitor where our poor people lived. She was astonished to learn that we did not have any neither white nor black—no suffering poor, I mean—nobody who have to live on charity.

It seems to me that there is plenty of good work for the alliance to do that will avail more than all this talk about the tariff and the sub-treasury schemes. They can build up their co-operative stores in every country town and get their supplies cheaper, but their big state exchanges will not work. They will take too much machinery and capital and are too remote from the farmers. We see that one in Texas has been sued for the misapplication of a million of dollars. These unpretending farmers' clubs in our county have done more good to the members than all the alliance has done. They meet once a month and interchange views and methods, and give in their expe-They meet once a month and interchange views and methods, and give in their experience and experiments, and they farm better every year and get their machines and supplies from first hands.

The alliance of Wilkes county has resolved to vote for no man for the legislature who will not pledge himself to support a bill that will limit a member's salary to two handred dollars a year. That soudds like business and reform too. If they will do that all over the state maybe we can save something. The last session cost the state one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the general opinion is that there was less done than at any session since the war. In fact, there was nothing done of any consequence except the lease bill of the State road, and that was only half done. Now let the farmers give us a new set and be-Now let the farmers give us a new set and begin the great work of reform. They may do no better, but they can't do worse. BILL ARP.

Freedom of Women.

What is the right of ballot to woman compared with her privilege of health? Among the many discoveries tending to promote the happiness of the human race, nothing is so intimately connected with the health of woman as the discovery of a remedy which fits her for the enjoyment of life and administering to the happiness of others. Bradfield's Female Regalator emancipates woman from the various ills peculiar to her sex; its use causes all irregularities to vanish-it does more for woman than any discovery of modern times. It never fails, as thousands of ladies will testify. Bradfield Reg. Co., Atlanta, Ga. Sold by all druggists.

I have never been more profoundly im-

She has as pure water as was ever distilled

Cartersville enjoys so many excellencies,

Cartersville is no less distinctive in her loca-tion. Situated on the Western and Atlantic railroad, at the junction of the East and West road of Alabama, forty-eight miles north of Atlanta, ninety miles from Chattanooga, and 13 miles from Birmingham. Two miles south of the city flows the beautiful Etowah river, and one mile north Pettits creek, affording a supply of watersufficient for the various man-ufacturing industries that will inevitably be ufacturing industries that will inevitably be built here. The Allatoona and Pine Log mountains, spurs of the Blue Ridge, rise up on the east and north of this city of 3,500 inhabitants, furnishing a vast store of abe east and north of this city of 3,500 inhabitants, furnishing a vast store of universal wealth, which insures active mining operations for years to come. A charter has been secured for the running of a road from Cartersville to Gainesville, on the Richmond and Danville road, a distance of seventy miles. This road will open up a section rich in minerals and stones and abounding in fertile farm lands. Along the route of this road are some of the richest placer gold mines ever discovered which were abandoned in the past on account of being so high in sulphurets, there then being no process known by which the gold could be saved. The entire section abounds in minerals and stones, besides furnishing picturesque attractions that would entertain those of extensive travel and research. The city has a series of gentle elevations that give it an admirable natural drainage and insure the finest health.

Iron and Manganese. In speaking of the iron deposits of this section, the late Dr. John W. Lewis wrote:

"Of the wonderful profusion of these ores and their richness I can speak in the highest terms. I have visited almost all the great iron deposits of the United States and have applored the beds of iron mountains of Missouri, but have never been so impressed by any exhibition of ore as by the mines of the Etowah district." The same author says:
"The iron ore, which is of excellent quality, is inexhaustible." Senator Joseph E. Brown endorses what Dr. Lewis said, and has emphasized his excellent judgment by making large purchases of these ores, A committee from the legislature of the state of Georgia endorses it [as follows: "The mineral resources along the valley of the Etowah river are very great and exceedingly Interesting to the state, especially those of iron." The quality of these ores is unimpachable, as will be seen by the following analysis from samples obtained by the former state geologist, and by him forwarded to Professor White, state chemist, at Atlanta, Ga.:

report of the department of mineralogy will place this city first as a producing point. The manganese here is lower in phosphorus than that of any other locality. Besides the various uses to which it is put, manganese is absolutely essential in the Bessemer process of making steel, which enables the manufacture of steel at a cost of one cent per pound, against the old cost of five and ten cents. Five pounds of ferro manganese, mixed with ninety-five pounds of pig fron, makes one hundred pounds of steel. The great steel works of the world are dependent upon manganese for their success. To show the quality of this ore, I quote the following analysis of Professor White: The Beautiful Etowah tow county will compare with any section of the country. Indeed, this is so eminently true that Bartow ranks as one of the banner farming counties of the state, producing a variety of crops that show forth the surpassing climate and fertility of the section.

Cotton, corn, tobacco, all the cultivated grasses, wheat, oats, barley, rye, sorghum, groundpeas, all the products of the temperate zone, except some varieties of the citrus family, find in Bartow county a soil and climate congenial and invigorating, and they reach as great perfection there as anywhere in the congenial and invigorating, and they reach as great perfection there as anywhere in the state. The average yield per acre of cotton for the whole county is one-half bale; the average yield per acre for the state is about one-fifth bale. The average yield of corn for the state is about 24,000,000 bushels. Of this Bartow county produces about 400,000 bushels. The Cartersville Land Company.

The land company of Cartersville has formed a nucleus for a great many improvements in the near future. This is comparatively a new organization, but the sound judgment which has controlled them in all the purchases made has added greatly to the strength of the company, besides placing beautiful lots on the market that have hitherto been beyond the reach of the purchaser. Their land is located in every part of the city, comprising some of the most desirable building lots that were ever put upon the market. I will not use the hackneyed term "gilt edge" in speaking of this magnificent property, but if the reader could see the beautiful residence lots, with their elegant views and grandly picturesque surroundings, he would feel that it was well worth a trip to this highly favored city merely to enjoy the sight. And since these lots are to be sold at an early day, it seems to me that it would be the most practical wisdom for real estate second at a real early day, it seems to me that The land company of Cartersville has formed worth a trip to this highly favored city merely to enjoy the sight. And since these lots are to be sold at an early day, it seems to me that it would be the most practical wisdom for real estate speculators and home-seekers to go upon the grounds and make a selection. The sale is to be bona fide, and no fabulous prices will be paid. It is by odds the best opportunity to get control of some of the most valuable property in Georgia, that has been presented to the public in years.

In addition to the destrable building lots, there are, on the property, some of the most advantageous sites. for manufactories that can be had in all north Georgia. This furnishes an excellent opportunity to those who wish to plant an industry in one of the best located, and at the same time most healthful cities in the South. The inducements offered manufacturies of all kinds are manifold. The climate is such that one can work every day in the year. The surrounding country produces all the vegetables necessary for family use, the health of the country is the finest. The general cost of living is cheap, rents being very moderate. Then the community is highly moral, the prohibition law, which is respected, insuring sobriety among workingmen. Add to this a tax rate so low as to make it nominal, excellent insurance rates, and a good system of public schools, and you have a point of the greatest advantages.

Another advantage that makes these lots especially desirable to those seeking real estate investments, is the fact that this entire country is teeming with several kinds of minerals and stones that are just beginning to be worked. When mining operations around Cartersville become active there will be the greatest demand for all this property. It will be but a few months before Cartersville will be enjoying the most encouraging development that has ever blessed a Georgia town. This is my deliberate judgment. Indeed, it is passing strange that the hand of progress has been idle so long. In view of this state of this method of advising my this method of advising my friends, even those

At this sale one thousand business and residence lots will be knocked down, and these will be scattered through the various parts of the city. The best arrangements will be made over the different railroads, so that easy access and cheap rates may be secured.

and most experienced business men, and the names of such men as D. W. K. Peacock, W. H. Howard, T. S. R. Jones, L. S. Mumford and John T. Noiris is sufficient to give the strongest endorsement to their advertised intention that this sale will take place in a regular, business-like way.

The person who has money to invest can do no better than place it in real estate that is growing in value, and the place that offers the surest and best returns for such an investment it occurs to me is Cartersville, the opportunity being the sale of one thousand choice business and resident lots that are advertied to be side to the highest bidder on May 29th and oven.

The Etowah Iron Company.

The Etowah Iron Company.

One of the greatest agencies of development in the entire country is the Etowah Iron company, operating at Cartersville. They have bought seventeen thousand acres of land, covering a radius of from six to ten miles, embracing some of the finest mineral lands in the south. Mr. A. O. Granger, president of the company, who was attracted to Georgia by the great mineral advantages of this section, came from Philadelphia. Before making this splendid investment he employed the services of a practical engineer to investigate the property, and after he had made a favorable report, to "make assurance doubly sure," he had the mineral products analyzed by Booth, Garrett and Blair, chemists and geologists, of Philadelphia, whose analysis emphasized the had the mineral products analyzed by Booth, Garrett and Blair, chemists and geologists, of Philadelphia, whose analysis emphasized the favorable estimate of the ore made by his engineer. Then Mr. Granger associated with him Senator Gazzum, of Philadelphia, and after buying seventeen thousand acros of mineral lands, comprising the celebrated property of Hon. Mark A. Cooper, he leased the Dobbins and Milner mills, in order to have full control of the entire body.

After spending ten or fifteen thousand dolars in prospecting, Mr. Granger determined to develop manganese first. He has put up washing mills for the ore, and has selected a very fine site on the Etowah river for this, where he can have a plenty of water and a proper dumping-ground. He is building a three-foot gauge road, with thirty pound rails, and in thirty days he will be mining five hundred tons a day. The Etowah company will, at present, operate as miners, and in future, if they find that it can be done to advantage they will take up the question of building a furnace for the manufacture of ferro-manganese and probably pig-iron. But he does not believe in These live real estate agents are doing perhaps more to advertise the admirable advantages and excellent outlook of Cartersville and Bartow county than any other one firm in the city. They are continually interesting themselves in getting some circular published, or devising some scheme to attract those who are on the investigative.

They have a large and profitable business, and are doing no little towards inducing foreign capital to their beautiful city. Their principal aim is to bring manufactories to the south, encourage large mining operations by placing extensive mineral pur-chases, and in various ways placing investments with foreign capitalists.

The prices on real estate around Cartersville are very reasonable, compared with what you find in other new towns of little or no population and not one-tenth the natural advantages of Cartersville. Messrs. Aubrey & McEwen, both gentlemen of cultured affability, fine judgment, strict integrity and agreeable intelligence, are well posted on the splendid agricultural and mineral advantages of Cartersville and surrounding country, and this should be noted by home-seekers and capitalists.

They guarantee the titles to all the land they sell, and are always ready to favor their purchasers in any reasonable way, gladly furnishing free any information regarding their section that may be desired by those living at a distance.

In speaking with Mr. McEwen, of the firm, several days ago, I heard some gratifying advances that had taken place in recent deals in real estate, without any effort at booming. One piece of property, which two years ago could have been bought for four hundred dollars, sold several days ago for twelve hundred. This was a building lot on the east side. Such advances have not been unusual during the past two years, and the next year or so will show even more activity. Still I would not be understood as predicting a boom. Cartersville doean't need such fictitious agencies to insure understood as predicting a boom. Cartersville doesn't need such fictitious agencies to insure her growth, and to quote Messrs. Aubrey &

Ochre Mill.

The manufacture of ochre is an important industry that is just coming into prominence in the south. It is interesting to investigate the process of its manufacture. The crude ore is first put in a trough filled with water and dissolved by a revolving shaft which is full of spikes, thowing from this into large receiving vessels, thence into a long trough from which it flows into vats, where it settles, and after the water is turned off it is put upon an evaporator, where it is dried by flue process, and then taken into the dry room, after which it is placed in the crusher and pulverized and barreled. There are two active mills in Cartersville, and both produce fine goods. The golden ochre is peculiar to this section of the state, the in-

Captain M. L. Pritchett, who operates a mill, turns out two tonsa day, and sells it in New York. He is an educated gentleman and has an intelligent idea of his business.

Mr. N. J. Beane, of Minneapolis, who was attracted to Cartersville by the superior quality of the ochre there, also runs a mill. He is interested in ochre-mining in several states, and evidently understands his business. He says that he turns out five tons a day and intends to double his capacity.

Hotels.

Hotels.

The Shellman house is a large, three-story brick building on the west side, having forty rooms, being newly fitted up and comfortably furnished. It is presided over by Mr. P. S. Shellman, one of the cleverest, most genteel and attentive hotel men in the south. He is aided by his excellent wife, who superintends the cooking personally, thus making a stopping place of elegant accommodations. The fare is excellent, the beds are neat and comfortable, the rooms delightful and everything first-class. Mr. Shellman will have a house full of boarders through the summer, having already received demands for rooms.

The "Southland" is a very comfortable, home-like place on the east side, a three-story brick building with about forty rooms. It is very neatly and comfortably furnished, well finished with hard woods, having good beds, nice ventilation, and as good fare as the market affords. Messrs. Frank Sharp and sons are very attentive to the trade, and enjoy an appreciative patronage. The "Southland" is a uery attractive house.

Distinguished People.

Rev. Sam Jones, the evangelist, resides here, surrounded by a happy and interesting family. In addition to being the most distinguished evangelist of the continent, he is one of the most liberal and progressive citizens of the south, always giving cheerfully to charity, leading freely in all plans suggested for the upbuilding of his town, and in various ways contributing to the moral educational and material advancement of his people. It is not surprising that he is so universally beloved by this people who know his many virtues. Sam Jones speaks to more people and accomplishes more good than any other evangelist on the face of the earth. At one time I took a different view of the man's work, but a visit to his home town in his absence, will sat-

This is also the home of Bill Arp, the south ern sage, who is the foremost humorist of the tates. It is not necessary for me to speak of this great man whose generous heart and cheerful philosophy have gained for him a membership in every family throughout this section. He is so well known and dearly beloved that any reference I might make would be superfluous.

Mrs. Felton, a writer on public affairs, possessing the strongest intellectuality, with the most profound knowledge, live happily here, enjoying the veneration and love of their neighbors.

The Courant-American,

The Courant-American, the only paper published in Cartersville, is easily one of the best and most progressive country weeklies published in the south. Messrs. Freeman and Willingham, the editors and publishers, are gentlemen who have enlisted the friendly sympathy of every true man and woman in Bartow county, for the commendable work that they have done for the moral, educational and material benefit of their people and section. They are strong, incisive and conscientions writers, and their paper sparkles with some of the best productions that ever enter the columns of the Geor-

School Advantagea.

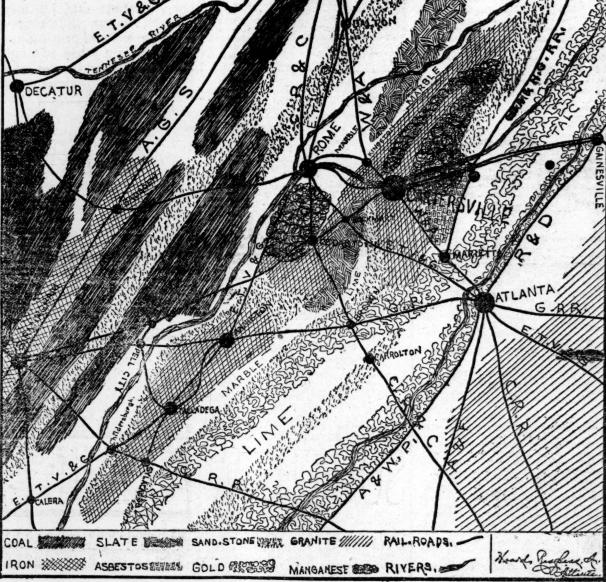

The splendid system of public schools at Cartersville would be a credit to any city in the state. The city owns two splendid brick buildings, besides two frame buildings, and the attendance of 400 pupils speaks eloquently for the management of these schools. The principals are gentlemen of experience, discretion and ability, and the schools are enjoying a season of brilliant prosperity.

Some Leading Busines & Men.

Among the leading men who contribute to Cartersville's mercantile strength are:

Porter & Vaughan, dealers in dry goods, notions, shoes, hats, etc. They occupy a store of 30xCO, (which they will soon enlarge by anaddition of forty feet) and do an annual business of $40,000. They are live, energetic young men, keep an elegant line of goods, and always lead in what they undertake.

He is now working two hundred men, and his weekly pay-roll is $1,500, with nothing coming in. In thirty days, however, this will be changed, and the great work that he has been doing for Cartersville and Georgia, will begin to bear fruit. Mr. Granger is ably assisted in his mining operations by Mr. J. Murray Africa, his superintendent, a graduate of Troy Polytechnic college; T. W. O'Dell, general foreman, and Dr. Edward D, Gazzum, who has charge of the laboratory. laboratory.

The work that Mr. Granger is doing cannot be too highly estimated or too thoroughly appreciated by all Georgians.

He is an exceptionally entertaining gentleman, agreeable in business and very hospitable at his home. His private residence, just twenty yards beyond the incorporate limits, is an attractive home, elegantly furnished, supplied with water and gas and surrounded by acres of natural shade. The entire place is being splendidly improved, and some beautiful lawns, grounds for lawn tennis and croquet, tropical plants, etc., combined with one of the finest natural elevations in all that picturesque country, will make this a place of marvelous beauty. The place is a selection of Mrs. Granger, and a very happy one it is, as from the look-out one of the most magnificent land-scapes that ever excited the viston, stretches before you, showing expansive valleys of green encircled by the azure spurs of the Blue Ridge.

His bank is the depository of the city, county and public school funds, East and West railroads of £labama and other larger corporations. This of itself speaks volumes for the business prudence of the directing spirit of this institution, whose entire business career has been such as to call for the unqualified endorsement of every fair man. A New Departure.

PRANKS OF THE IMAGINATION,

Some Queer Quips of Fancy With an Odd Mixture of Jest.

"The imagination plays queer pranks with people. My grandmother caught a severe cold one night because she thought the window was up; but the next morning it was found that the vindow was securely fastened down."

That did very well for a starter, but the next one was even more surprising. "I went to my brother's house one evening when he was to have the boys around," said a rising young politician, "and I saw on the table a whisky bottle with the Monogram brand." "That's right, Bud," said I. "When you do

"That's right, Bud," said I. "When you do have anything to drink get a good article. There's nothing worse than mean whisky."
"Yes," said my brother, "that's so."
"The boys came and the "Monogram" bottle was emptied with all the enthusiasm that could have been expected. They all pronounced it good, and went home happy.
"That night my brother became confidential and informed me that we had not been drinking Monogram whisky at all. He had a Monogram bottle but it was empty for the reason.

ogram bottle but it was empty for the reason that it was against his principle to keep sealed bottles in the house. He came home late to supper and did not have time to get the article he wanted, so he got ordinary whisky and poured it into the Monogram bottle and no one knew any better." tle, and no one knew any better."
"My dear Bud," said I, "I am proud of you;

such thoughtfulness will make you a congress-

Captain C. M. Furlow, the erudite statistician of the comptroller-general's office, who is so inquisitive about the people's property, raised his eye from his tables long enough to remark that the greatest flight of imagination he ever heard of was Colonel Bob Irwin's belief that his hair would grow again.

Colonel Irwin shook his remaining locks after the manner of a lion shaking his mane, and roused himself to tell a story.

"There lives a man near Marietta," said he, "who used to keep books by means of pictures,

"There lives a man near Marietta," said he, "who used to keep books by means of pictures. He could not read or write, and the only way he could make a memorandum was to make a picture of the article he sold. If he sold a plow point he made picture of it in his book, and got the man to write his name opposite. If he sold a cheese or a chicken he made a picture of, that. One day he sold a grindstone, and marked it down on his book, but forgot to put the hole in the center. When the customer came to settle, he was surprised to find himself charged with a cheese.

"I never got it." said he.

"But you did. It's marked down here, and you can see it for yourself."

"But you did. It's marked down here, and you can see it for yourself."

"That looks like a cheese," said the customer, "but I never bought one."

"You must have bought it, for I never put anything down until it's sold."

"I can't help that; I didn't get it."

Then a long wrangle ensued. Finally, when it seemed that nothing but bloodshed would settle the dispute, the customer happened to remark that he had got a grindstone that season.

"Oh, yes, that's it!" said the merchant, "it was a grindstone, and I forgot to mark'the hole."

Colonel Irwin told this story in all seriousness, affirming that the man lived near Marietta, and freqently swapped ax-handles with his grandfather.

"You remind me of Rip Van Winkle," said the man with a quill.

"Yes," said the inquisitive Furlow, "I saw that grindstone tale in Burton's cyclopedia of wit and humor three years before I was born."
"Wh—wh—a—t's that?" said Mr. Irwin, in a tone of alarm. "Three years before the war, I mean."

"That was before my time," said Colonel Irwin solemnly.
"There's a fine flight of imagination," inter-

"This story about the Marietta man has been a tradition so long that the memory of this generation runneth not to the contrary," continued the colonel. "I am glad to see that you earry your age so well."

"A-hem," said Captain Furlow, looking wistfully at the table before him, "did you know I am afraid these agricultural statistics are not going to amount to much."

"What's the trouble?"

"Why, the people are not answering the questions. They seem to think the state is interferring in their private business for the purpose of taking some advantage of them. Here is a tax receiver who writes that he has not been able to get returns from a great many because they are superstitious and think the state is trying to take advantage of them. Others say they can't swear to what they don't state is trying to take advantage of them. Others say they can't swear to what they don't know, and they have never measured the acreage planted in particular crops. Others say they are not obliged to give in, as there is no penalty attached to the act. The trouble is that the receivers do not enter into the matter heartily. It almost doubles their work and adds nothing to their pay. They already had large duties in proportion to compensation."

"What do you write these men?"
"What do you write these men?"
"Judge Nisbet's idea is that a man's return of property to the tax receiver is not complete until he answers the questions propounded by the agricultural department, and until his return is complete a man will be liable to double tax. I give them the benefit of that opinion.
Some of the tax receivers write me that men in certain districts have made a compact not in certain districts have made a compact not to answer these questions."

WHERE MR. STEPHENS WAS BORN. This resting-place of the dust of citizens who Inhabited our land a century ago is enclosed by an old granite wall, which has long since grown gray with age, and the steady hand of time is slowly, but surely, making inroads upon its face. The plum trees are growing luxuriantly around the old place, and the familiar seenes of the pleasant long ago are yet faintly delineated to the visitor as the renowned old place is approached.

The fatherly old trees around the homestead have long since withered, decayed, and there is no trace of them left save a few scrubby bushes hovering around the place where there inhabited our land a century ago is enclosed by bushes hovering around the place where there once stood a double log-cabin. It was a house similar to those that were common to our people a hundred years ago, having two large rooms on either side of a wide and inviting hall. When the country was fresh, a beautiful landscape stretched around this sweet old home, the home of the days when this virgin country was mellow with all the richness that the All-wise so profusely lavished upon the mother earth. No pen nor art could de justice to a scene like it was, and we can only say that the busy citizen of the present day would but envy the inmates of that love in a

The logs of which this house was built were hewn by skilled hands in the days when revolutionary scenes were fresh in the memory of the people, and they formed a large and comfortable room on either side of the inviting hall. The house was among the best in the section (then Wilkes county), but was cut off in forming Taliaferro county about

It was at this place and in this house that the Hon. Alexander Hamilton Stephens, whose name and career are familiar in the households of all the union, first saw the light. February 11, 1812, was the day on which the treat Georgian was horn.

February 11, 1812, was the day on which the graf Georgian was born.

During the year 1805, Andrew B. Stephens, the father of Hon. A. H. Stephens, removed from Kettle Creek to this section, and settled this place. Mr. Stephens's father and grandfather both died in this house, and beneath the leaves and moss-covered earth, within the walls of this old graveyard, are buried the remains of the father and mother, while a hundred yards away lie the ashes of the grandfather. All are appropriately marked with marble slabs. The grandness about this old place, associated with the life of the great Stephens, makes it noted, and many people, day after day, from far and near, visit the old homestead.

The old hills are the same as they used to be when the tender-hearted Stephens used to roam the woods in search of the knowledge from nature in his early boyhood days. Near was the neighborhood school, where he the letters that enabled him.

ville, and always loved the place and her people, and with this in mind he placed the first parnings of his law practice towards the purchase of the plantation and old homestead where he was born. It was even his pride and pleasure to walk and ride over this old plantation, although the dear old house, as above seen, has long since been torn away and a more modern house built in its place.

Upon a beautiful elevation in the northern portion of Crawfordville lived Mr. Williamson Bird, with whom Mr. Stephens bearded for years. His place was one of the most pleasant in this section of the state, and Mr. Stephens became so much attached to the location and general situation that in 1843, when the young statesman was in the bloom of life, he bought the old Bird house and began house-keeping, calling his home "Liberty Hall," which name is familiar almost the world over. For years the same old-styled house remained there in this lovely park, and all the world was welcome to stop at and make it a home. It was truly a "Liberty Hall."

On the west of "Liberty Hall" is the lot where Mr. William Jones, the father of Crawfordville, lived for years, and at which place the old man breathed his last. Mr. Stephens's body-servant, Harry. who was known by Mrs. Stephens's friends as one of the most honest and upright colored men of the country, bought this old Jones place and had erected there a handsome eight-room dwelling. Mr. Stephens aided Harry in building his home, and it now stands as a monument to the faithful servant, whose ashes rest in the cemetery near by, his widow, a highly respected woman which is published herewith, is an eight-room, two-story house, with verandas both front and in the rear, with wide halls through the center above and below. Extending back immediately in the rear are two rooms used as dining-rooms with inviting verandas on either side. It was in these rooms that Mr. Stephens used to banquet the leading men of our land, and the genial host would always have the best the market afforded.

To the left of the main hall on the first floor was the parlor, a very plain, yet attractively arranged room, where guests were ushered and received with the cordiality peculiar to the great commoner. The other rooms, except one, were used as bed-rooms for his guests. Many people would come to Crawford-ville far and near to visit "Liberty Hall" and seek advice and council from Mr. Stephens, and he would alwars take over of these librorests. he would always take care of them like guests of the best hotels of our land. It was a treat for any man who loved learning to drink of the great fountain that flowed from the lips of the owner of "Liberty Hall" at all times, and hence so many people sought the company and to master the language which made him famous.

The age of thirteen found young Alex. H.

Stephens both fatherless and motherless, and

Stephens both fatherless and motherless, and

ao money with which to acquire an education. It was an irksome path to travel to undertake to climb the ladder of fame as he did, when looking from his boyhood situation concerning his financial standing. Besides his finances there was his feeble health to contend with, and with his untiring energy he arose to be the illustrious lawyer, legislator, congressman, senator and governor of our great state as the general public remembers him.

While he was governor of Georgia he still loved the discount of the state of the st

This room is today kept as nearly as possible as it was when Governor Stephens died on the 4th of March, 1883. The possible as it was when Governor Stephens died on the 4th of March, 1883. The old clock still stands on the mantel with its hands pointing to the hour when the great life ended and his spirit took its flight to bright skies beyond. Not a sound has been issued from the stilled wheels, nor a signal from the bell that told the hour at which Mr. Stephens breathed his last has been heard from the old time-piece since. It stands as the silent watch over the room that contains the same furniture that was used last by the lamented statesman. The bed is yet like it was the last morning he rested upon it, except the mourning drapery that hangs about the ruffled pillows, put there justafter his death by loving hands of the true women who loved our country and its noble sons.

In the center of the room is a small round table upon which rest several books that were handled last by Mr. Stephens, and on this table he wrote most of his letters, speeches and books. Many pages of his manuscript are lying loosely about the table today.

The writer, a few days ago, while looking over the room, found a few letters of the dead statesman and looking at the chirography brought forcibly to mind a letter that he once wrote to his brother, Hon. Linton Stephens, advising him "to write a better hand;" that it was scarcely legible. All who knew the great commoner's handwriting will appreciate the idea of his reproving any one about their writing.

While he was governor of Georgia he still loved the happy scenes of his childhood—when he used to read his tattered books by the glittering light of a burning pine-knot. Only a short while ago a citizen of Taylor county was relating a story of how he longed to go to southwest Georgia so he could be treated to one of those old-time pine-knot fires. He said he always loved them, and that no improved coal-grate fire seemed half so cheerful as the old Georgia pine fire.

In the days when young Alex was getting his education, he would go to school a portion of the year, and plow awhile. He had many turns to take at this stage of his life, and it is said that many days did he take his spelling and definition from one end of the furrow to the ther. Word after word he learned perfectly his manner, until he had a common-sized dictionary stored away in his head.

In 1827, he labored carnestly and untiringly under the tutorship of Rev. Alexander Hamilton Webster for nine months, and then entered college fully prepared for the freshman class. Mr. Webster them died, and young Alex Stephens loved his teacher so much for the hindness shown him in giving him his tuition, that he put the "Hamilton" in his own name. Upon the walls hang the pictures of General Robert Toombs, General Howell Cobb, Dr. W. H. Felton, Peter Cooper and others, growing gray with age. Here there are other ancient pictures in frames to correspond, such as the marriage of Pocahontas and the landing of Christopher Columbus. The most striking of the wall ornaments is a framed profile bust of James Oglethorpe, made of plaster of Paris.

Hanging on the sides of the fire-place, over the mantel, are striking pictures of "Faith" and "Hope," in their attitudes of sweetness, watching the star of Bethlehem.

This about completes the furniture of the sacred room, except a few ordinary chairs and a servant's bed that is concealed by a light screen of colored cloth stretched upon frames. Many people, from all parts of the world, visit this room yearly, and none can help but being impressed with wonder upon entering it.

Stephens, and is the only thing that marks this sacred ground that all Georgia and the south love. It is strange, yet too true, that the people of the state, and even the United States, have stood silent so long, and let the grave of the great Stephens remain so long in this condition.

The good ladies of this section and some from a distance, aided by gentlemen of patriotism, have decided to put a monument over Mr. Stephens's resting-place, and for that purpose funds are solicited from the world at large. It has been decided by the Stephens Memorial association and the Stephens Ladies' Auxiliary association to erect a monument as respectable as possible for the amount of money that can be raised by the first of June next. After that time the work will commence, and we furnish herewith a proposed monument which will be befitting for the grave of the great man, according to the liberality of the people who have aided and who will aid in its erection, but not such a monument as his glorious life deserves.

It will be remembered that the association

It will be remembered that the association to his memory has bought the property of "Liberty Hall" and has endeavored to keep it as he used to keep it, so as to make the "hall" a monument to his great life.

THE AMETHYST RING.

By the ancients that precious stone known as amethyst was regarded with great veneration and considered as a perfect talisman to prevent drunkenness. Now, I am as far from superstition as any man that you can find during the course of a day's journey, but the following true narrative, which I propose to relate, came very near shattering my breasttions of any kind. Henry Bryan and myself were classmates and naturally joined the same regiment during the war between the states. We had passed through several fierce and deadly struggles unharmed, but the battle of Monocacy left us both wounded upon the field. Henry was shot through the left lung and was in a precarious condition while I was content with a shattered knee, the effects of a stray minnie ball. The smoke of battle had cleared away and the southern troops, under Early, had retired across the Potomac after having been almost in sight of the national capital.

When I came to my senses I found myself in a hospital, kindly and tenderly treated by volunteer nurses who sympathized with the south and took this means of showing their devotion. After remaining in the hospital several weeks I was sufficiently recovered to be removed to Fort Deleware, from which prison I was paroled at the close of the war. I lost sight of Henry Bryan and did not meet him again until a few days ago, when I met him in the arcade of the Kimball house. We had much to talk about and during the interview he gave me a synopsis of his life's history which I reproduce.

"You know that I found great difficulty in the army in controlling my appetite for intoxicating liquors. Well, after you were convalescent and had been carried to Fort Deleware, I began to recover and the old thirst returned with a fierceness I could hardly stand, and my whole thoughts were bent upon some scheme to secure a stimulant of some kind. Mary Sturgis was an angel if there ever was one on earth, and the kind and gentle manner of her treatment to me during my illness made an impression that time can never efface and her sweet and patient face is indellibly photographed upon my memory.

"I was weak from the loss of blood from my wound, and in the tenderness of her heart, Mary brought me a bottle of wine to give me strength. I seized it greedily and after once getting a taste of it did not relinquish the bottle until every drop of the amber fluid had trickled down my throat. I sank back upon my cot in a stupor and when I awoke my fair and faithful nurse had gone, probably dis-gusted at my conduct in drinking the wine. I rubbed my eyes and looked around me, when I discovered a beautiful amethyst ring on one

Both Ankles Crushed.

In a railroad smash-up in 1876, I had both ankles badly crushed. Soon after Blood Poison set in, and both legs, from my knees down, were covered with ulcerated sores, that refuse all efforts to heal. I was virtually helpless for ten years, being bedridden most of the time. During all the time I was attended by the best physicians in this section of the state, and must have taken a cart-load of medicine, without re ceiving any relief of being benefited in any way. In 1887, I was induced to try Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) I commenced to improve from the first dose, and continued to get better until today I am as sound and well as any man in the universe. of my fingers. I examined it closely and found engraved on the inner side 'Mary Sturgis, Frederick City, Md.' I have never seen Mary from that day to this, and although twenty-six years have elapsed, I shall always regard her as a guardian angel who saved me from an untimely death.

"At the close of the war I returned to Georgia and was soon engaged in publishing a country weekly in my native town. I soon met and fell in love with a beautiful girl and in a short while we were happily married. She knew nothing of my depraved taste for whisky and considered the match a fortunate one, as I was then well-to-do, young and handsome. Three years elapsed when our house was robbed, and among other articles stolen was the amethyst ring which was temporarily lying upon the dresser. The next morning I began to drink again and for six months did not know what it was to draw a sober breath. One morning I was seated at my desk opening the morning mail, so nervous from dissipation that I could scarcely hold myself still. I saw a letter in a delicate, feminine hand, and opened it tremblingly when the lost amethyst ring rolled out upon the desk. There was not a line to indicate whence it came, but I knew at once that by some mysterious means it had reached Mary Sturgis and that she had re-turned it to me. I had a bottle of whisky in the office then, and the first thing I did was to hurl it from the window; the next to go home to my anxious wife and acquaint her with the mysterious return of my mascot. I was a sober man from that day for seven years, and the dark shadow that had formerly hung over our lives was forgotten. My boy had grown to be a likely lad and was the pride and joy of our houshold. One day he innocently bor rowed the amethyst ring to wear to a juvenile party, and unluckily, had the misfortune to break it. Before the week was out the terrible thirst, which had laid dormant for seven years, was again aroused with all the fierce-ness of yore and the upright conduct and steady habits of this happy period were broken and shattered as easily as a thin glass before a terrific cyclone. This debauch came very near closing my earthly career. I drank as long as I could walk and begged for it when flat of my back in bed. With a thoughtfulness ever characteristic of her who has shared my fortunes through sunshine and shadow, she had the ring mended, and while lying in a stuper, replaced it upon my finger. The delerium soon passed away and through the mercy of God, I have again been restored to my natural mind and habits. Our littles household is again bright and cheerful, and once again the enemy of my soul has been defeated. The amethyst ring is the most cherished article of jewelry in our possession and instrumental in saving from a drunkard's grave, and when she shall pass over the river there will be no jewel brighter in her crown than the amethyst ring." an the amethyst ring.

The reaction in wheat, of which there were signs a week ago, became distinct, but was followed by another upward jerk when the state reports indicated that the official return for May would show no improvement in its condition.

Cotton is a shade weaker than a week ago on account of injury, and less impressive.

Iron shows no great change, the radical feature in that branch being the transfer of the point of production to southern instead of northern fields. The increase in the wool supply this year cannot be large, but expectations of higher prices, so generally entertained by the growers, tend to embarrass manufacturers. Boston sales were 2, 645,000 pounds; ten per cent more than last year, with prices stiff.

The movements of meats continue heavy. At Chicago three million pounds of dressed beef, against 945,000 last year. Beef cattle have reached the highest point for the year, and hogs grow stronger at the west.

The drygoods business continues of full volume at Chicago; larger than last year, and the shoe trade is also larger. The volume of all trades, shown by exchanges outside of New York, remains about ten per cent above last year's, which in turn was the largest on record. The reports from the interior cities indicate a fairly maintained activity. The money market is fairly supplied, with a prospect of increasing abundance.

The business failures throughout the country during the week, number for the United States 135, Canada 24; total 209; against 211 last week.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 9.—[Special.]—Upon a letter from Mrs. Julia Caswell, of Whitesville, N. C., the police today arrested Don Allen, a girl thirteen years old, and her abductor, Joseph B. Their description were given and the police soon found them at a boarding-house, but did not make the arrest at once. Last night Black took the girl out of town and remained in the woods all night. When he returned this morning he was arrested and the girl taken to the stationhouse. Don Allen Caswell says that Black had promised her repeatedly to take her home. They will remain here until the arrival of the requisition paper for Black.

DR. E. S. LYNDON—Dear Sir My child, five years old, had symptoms of worms. I tried calomel and other worm medicines, but failed to expel any. Seeing Mr. Bain's certificate, I got a vial of your Worm Oil, and the first dose brought forty worms, and the second dose so many were passed I did not count them.

The Worm Oil is perfectly harmless and will remove every worm, when given according to directions. It costs only 25c. It is worth that much to feel assured that your child is not wormy.

For sale by all druggists, or if your druggist does not keep it, we will send it to any address for 25 cents.

dence.]-Within ten days Syracuse can boast of one of the costliest stables in the world, representing an outlay of more than millionaire bachelor. The knowledge of the work, which he has had in hand for more than two years, has spread all over the country. among the horsemen and breeders especially, and very many visitors have come from a distance to inspect the magnificent building, but up to this time, public admission has been denied. Now the announcement is made that Mr. Crouse will throw this horse palace open for inspection at an early day, and it is pected that the most noted horsemen in the United States will be his guests.

HAMBERLIN,

ARGEST

Mr. Crouse's stable stands in Mulberry street, and in the rear of the old Crouse man sion, which faces on Fayette park. It has been most carefully constructed, with no stint in regard to expense. Mr. Crouse's father, the his name in his magnificent gift of the Crouse university, and it is believed that his son will

The foundation is of cut stone, laid in Portland cement, and is of extra thickness. The front of the building is sixty feet, and it has a depth of eighty feet. It is three stories high, exclusive of the gables. The materials used in its construction are New Hampshire med sandstone, Trenton brick and encaustic tile and terra cotta. The lower story is en-closed in sandstone, above which the brick superstructure rises.

The main entrance is on Mulberry street, in the middle of the building. In the center of the south side, facing on a broad alley, is an arched driveway through which the horses and carriages will pass out. There is also a pedes-trian entrance on this side. On the north side is a stable-yard and private blacksmith shop.

The gables of the building and stone-carving are elaborate and attractive. Especial attention has been given in the building to ventila-tion, heating, lighting and plumbing. The bath-rooms are models of luxury. The tables have been completely wired to electric illumination. The heating is building is the feature. The rarest and most costly woods, combined with the finest workmanship, have made the rooms wonders of the designers' and joiners' arts. All of the woodwork is of solid material, no veneering being resorted to. The woods used in finishing the rooms are San Domingo mahogany, ebony, bethabia, white holly, California redwood and oak. The plans of the rooms combine elegance and luxury with usefulness.

The basement is divided into compartments for coal-cellars, wash-rooms, storing carriages and the heating apparatus. It also contains and the heating apparatus. It also contains an elliptical eighth-mile-track for exercising the horses during inclement weather. On the first floor are the stables, reception-room and two offices, fronting on Mulberry street. The entrance hall is in the old English style. The wood-work is of mahogany very richly carved and paneled. The floor is of tiled mosaics and the ceiling is composed of small panels in honey-combed work. Two heavy mahogany deors open into the office lobby, which contains a part of the elevator shaft, and connects the two offices. The wood-work of the lobby is of two offices. The wood-work of the lobby is of mahogany inlaid with ebony. The wainscoting is about three feet and a half high. Glazed tiles of chocolate and yellow are placed between the base and rail of the wainscoting. The walls are also of mahegany and ebony.

The office on the right of the lobby is proba-The office on the right of the lobby is probably one of the most expensively decorated rooms in this country. The wood-work is of solid rosewood. The room will also serve as a reception-room. The room is lighted with four windows. The curtains and portieres are of the finest texture. The floor is a fine piece of mosaic work of mahogany, birds-eye maple, bethabla, white holly and California redwood. The carving and the finishing of the wood are really exquisite. A frieze eight inches wide runs entirely around the room. The ceiling is of rosewood, beautifully carved and paneled. An immense chandelier of solid brass is a feature.

The corresponding office on the north is even more elegant. It is finished in solid mahegany, and, in detail, is almost identical with that of the rosewood room. There is a decided any, and, in detail, is almost identical with that of the rosewood room. There is a decided sense of rargeness, however, as everything seems to have been designed with an eye to vastness and helght. An elevator, finished in mahogany, rosewood and brass, leads to the apartments above from the rosewood room.

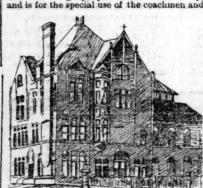

Ascending the stairs one enters the dressing-room. It is finished with mahogany, with a wainscoting about three and a half feet high, and constructed in panels about five feet long, and held in place by richly carved pilasters. The walls are broken by windows, doors and arches. One door opens into a lobby and wine-room. On the north is a wide vestibule, hemmed in by colonnades and arches. The arches lead into the dining-room They are carved most uniquely with floral designs and ornate medallions. The drawing-room frieze is wrought in the image of birds and their plumage. It is two feet in width. In the center of the ceiling is a large beveled edge French plate mirror, diamond-shaped. From the center of the is as suspended the chandelier of solid brass. The stile of the ceiling, two feet in width, is wrought in the same tracing as the frieze.

In the dining-room is an immense sideboard, thirteen feet high and thirteen feet wide. It was built at a cost of $2,000. It is said that a ton of mahogany was used in the construction. The culinary department is on the third floor. A billiard-room is located back of the south drawing-room. It is finished in antique oak, but the ceiling is of different colored woods, beamed and paneled. The windows are fitted with cathedral glass, and face the east.

The bric-a-brac, draperies, bronzes, etc., are to be proportionately elaborate and costly. One bronze piece has been imported at a cost of 48,000 francs. It is called "The Parting Cup." It weighs four hundred pounds and stands five feet high. Two clocks represent an outlay of $1,200, and a music box cost $800.

In all this lavish expenditure the horses have been by no means overlooked. The stalls are on the ground floor in the rear of the building. The receiving-room of the stable is a spacious apartment, finished in antique oak, and with heavy plate glass windows. Massive mahogany doors open from the driveway on the south of the building. Running the entire length of the room are rows of heavy rubber matting leading to an elevator, which elevates the carriages to a repository on the third floor. The stalls are located to the east of this room. Rubber matting leads to the doors. Long cabinets are provided with richly paneled doors, in which to hang the harnesses. A small vestibule, finrovided with richly paneled doors, in which to hang the harnesses. A small vestibule, finished in mahogany, opens out on the driveway and is for the special use of the coachmen and attendants. A stairway leads from the receiving-room into a room reserved for furs, blankets and robes. The room is lined entirely with red cedar to prevent moths from nesting. From this room also leads an inclined plane to the basement, where the exercising track is located.

There are fourteen stalls in all, ten of them being box-stalls on the north and south sides. The wood work is entirely of oak, highly finished. Heavy pilasters serve as door casings, and rise from the floors to the tops of the doors. Above each door is a pannelled transom, carved in scroll work and vines. Topping this and running entirely around each stall is coindle work and posts.

LITTLE DAVE

"Crazy grown folks are common, but its mighty seldom you hear of crazy children," said Plunkett, as he turned to face Brown and

"He lived over the creek—beyond the mill, there—and he had got usened to some mighty hard times and lonesome times, for the men folks were all in the army and Little Dave's mama had to leave him all alone many et time to go off to mill and to scuffle erround in many ways that these since the war women "On the day I'm telling you of the mother left home early to procure some meal. Kiss-ing her little boy good-bye, she promised him to be back by the dinner hour and she brushed a tear from her eye as she turned at the bend as he set straddle of the big gate-post watching her departure.

"For hours Little Dave set, first on one post and then on the other, watching the bend of the road for his mother's return. At last the sun turned over toward the west and Dave knew that his mother should have been at home—it was past the dinner hour. With pa-tient-set face the little fellow still held up, but the tears were running down his cheeks and dirt had stripped his face from the hands that had wiped 'em away. Little Dave was rest ess now. It was two o'clock and his mama was still away. He was hungry and scared now and his eyes were hurting from his watch ing. Everything leaves the old place, he thought, Little Dave and mama was all that was left, and now mama is gone and there is nothing left but poor Little Dave. Thus he waited and watched, till at last, exhausted, he threw himself upon the grass and cried him-was crying and struggling and was frantic be-cause she could not get to him. But so it was, the vankees had come, she was cut off from home and from Little Dave, and the battle would soon begin.

"Hardee's troops were double-quicking over the fields and old Sherman was anxious to do any kind of devilment, but Little Dave slept on and knew nothing of what was going on.

"At last the guns opened—the cannon and the muskets—and he was awakened by the din. Think of a little six year-old boy being awakened in the midst of a great battle. So it was. He awoke dazed. He run here there, crying 'maina! mama! mama!' The cavalry rushed past him, the artillery lum-bered by, the yell of the troops, mingled with the rattle of the guns and Little Dave lost his mind-he was crazy-a crazy child. Many of the evils of life are inherited. Parents transmit to their children a state of blood impurity. What a fearful heritage to bequeath e an innocent child! It is surely a disgrace that this should be so. It is manifestly the duty of everyone to keep their blood pure and their systems in a condition of good health. Nature has given us kindly herbs that will accomplish this if properly used. The best are used with careful selection in that compound known as Dr. Bull's Sarsaparilla. There is no phase of blood poison this incomparable alterative will not relieve. If a sufferer from blood disease, you do yourself great injustice if you fail to try it.—Springfield Express.

YOUR BLOOD

May Be Your Ruin—Find Out What Is th Matter and be Treated.

Piles (Hemorrhoides) are blind, bleeding, and protruding; all produced by the same causes, which are constipation, irregular habits, natural weakness (hereditary), etc. They are generally considered dangerous only when they endanger life or health from loss of blood. They are the parent of all other diseases of the bowels, such as ulceration of bowels, cancer, stricture of same, together with fistula in ano, and all their fearful results. Such being the result of neglect; can you afford to take such chances? You may dread the severe operation you have been told was necessary to care you; if so you need not wait any longer, for all the suffering you may have formerly have had to undergo can now be avoided. My mode of treating all these diseases is both pleasant and satisfactory, and will not confine you one hour to your house, detain you from your business, or rob you of your pleasure. Can you afford to put off the attention of this matter until life is a burden to you, or will you act wisely and at once? If you wish any information further, I can give you all the information you may want, and will cheerfully do so. Many of my patients will gladly tell you what I have done for them, and on application I will furnish you their names. My success in the past I make my standard for the future. Napoleon at a Review-Theodore O'Hara--The Russian Censorship-Theaters in Japan-A Study of Consciousness.

A South Carolinian's view of Napoleon in 1804, when the young Corsican was in the flush of rising fortunes, is far different from that of the glowing historian, whose books have been so popular with the school-boy, but have been so popular with the school-boy, but I assure you that the censor will prohibit it."

1. Color of the properties of 1804, when the young Corsican was in the flush of rising fortunes, is far different from It is doubtless a more correct one, for Mr. Brisbane's notes were evidently not written to sell. His description of Napoleon at a review will be found interesting.

The account of theatres in Japan has unique interest also, and will be relished by the lovers of the stage. George Kennan's articles on the Siberian prison system have roused the world to its herrors, and the Russian government finds it necessary to "black out" these articles with a stamp used by the censors. This starts Mr. Kennan to writing about Russian censorship, which he describes in his usual interesting way. Theodore O'Hara, like Byron, left his way. Theodore of flata, like Byron, left his country to help the struggling patriots of a foreign country fight for liberty. An interest-ing account of the southern soldier poet is epitomized from Robert Burns Wilson's article in the Century.

Napoleon Reviewing His Troops. Mr. William Brisbane, a South Carolinian who was sojourning abroad in 1804, made voluminous notes on what he saw, and the manuscript volume of that itinerary has been resurrected on a new England farm.

Among other things is a description of a re view of his troops by Napoleon on October 12th, 1804. Mr. Brisbane had been traveling through France, and was astonished at the miserable condition of the roads the wretched state into which peasantry of France had been cast by the recent revolution. He had to pay the postilions double, and even then they were dissatisfied and saucy. The post horses were "wretched looking animals, whose tails and manes hang every way, tied to your carriage with ropes and such execrable tackling that it is constantly giving way and

It was in strange contrast with this state that he saw the splendor of the ceremonies attending the coronation of the emperor. But first came the review on the 12th of October, which Mr. Brisbane described as fol-

October, which Mr. Brisbane described as follows:

"The Emperer Napoleon arrived at St. Cloud on October 12th, having been for some time absent on a visit to the coast, inspecting the several armaments designed for the invasion of England. On the 28th there was a grand review of the imperial guard and several regiments of the line in the courtyard of the Tuileries, amounting to eight or ten thousand men, composed of infantry, cavalry and artillery; and here we had the satisfaction of seeing for the first time the celobrated conqueror of Italy. His appearance was far from dignified or inspiring beholders with that awe which one would expect in such a character. However he might be in action, he makes but a poor figure on parade. From our situation we had an excellent opportunity of observing him. We were within eight or ten yards of the spot on which he took his station while reviewing the troops. His stature is something below the middle size, his complexion of a yellow, sickly hue, a prominent chim, and his eyes a little sunk. His countenance has a melaucholy, serious cast. Yet, notwithstanding these disadvantages, his face is by no means homely. He was surrounded by a group of generals whose brilliant uniforms rendered his plain dress the more conspicuous. Except his epaulets, his whole dress was perfectly plain, without either lace or embroidery. He wore his hair cut short, without powder, and a plain cocked hat with a national cockade. As soon as he descended into the courtyard he mounted a handsome white steed, and immediately set off full gallop, inspecting every corps, passing through the lines, and receiving petitions, a number of which we presented by the soldiers. He is a very bold rider, but not a very good, and certainly an ungraceful one. From his bad horsemanship (by improperiy checking) he brought himself and horse to the ground. He then dismounted while the mud was washed off the seif and horse to the ground. He then dis-mounted while the mud was washed off the poor animal, but he disdained changing his own dress, and appeared at the levee after the parade in his muddy uniform, where the diplo-matic corps and a number of spracely attired strangers had the honor of heing thus received. mane corps and a number of spracely attried strangers had the honor of being thus received by him. In the suite of the emperor was his favorite Mameluke, a likely young man who accompanied him from Egypt. The review lasted three hours and a half and was very

We who live in a free country have little idea of the galling yoke under which the people of Russia are staggering. George Kennan, whose articles on Russia and Siberia have opened the eyes of the world to the sufferings of their fellow-men under this great despotism, has challenged the Russian government to disprove his statements. Of course, they pay no attention to the challenge, but their censors regularly cut or blot his articles out of the magazines sent to people in Russia.

The rigor of the censorship upon the press rouses the hot feelings of indignation in those who have known nothing but an untrammeled

In the May Century, Mr. Kennan has an article headed "Blacked Out," in which fac-similes are given of the first and last pages of his article in last August's Century, after it had been through the hands of the Russian censor. The intervening pages were torn out, and the first and last were blacked with a stamp which covered the whole page, leaving only Mr. Kennan's name.

Mr. Kennan gives this remarkable instance

of the censorship, to which the daily papers of Russia are subjected:

"In the month of June, 1886, there assembled in the old Tartar city of Kazan a quasi-representative body of Russian citizens, which was half-humorously designated by the liberals of the town as the 'Plague Parliament.' It consisted of delegates from the zemstvos, or local assemblies, of all the provinces lying adjacent to the river Volga, and it met for the purpose of discussing the then prevalent cattle plague, and taking such measures as might be found necessary to stamp out the epidemic. I happened at the time to be in Kazan, and on the morning appointed for the opening of the 'parliament.' I was in my room discussing. the morning appointed for the opening of the 'parliament.' I was in my room discussing Russian affairs with the city editor of one of the local newspapers and a professor in the Kazan university.

"'I think,' said the editor, 'that I will go back to the office and write an editorial expecting."

"'I think,' said the editor, 'that I will go back to the office and write an editorial suggesting that, inasmuch as delegates from all the Volga river zemstvos have assembled here to discuss the cattle plague, a favorable opportunity is afforded for the discussion of certain other important questions in which the Volga river provinces are interested."

"'Do you know what will happen if you attempt anything of that sort?" inquired the professor.

prohibit it.'

"'I'm going to make it, nevertheless,' said the editor; 'and if you (turning to me) will come around to the office between eleven and twelve o'clock tonight, you shall know the result.'"

"At the appointed hour I went to the editorial rooms of the "Daily Gazette," and took a seat near the desk of Mr. A— to await the return of the proof-sheets of the next morning's paper. About midnight a smail bell rang in an adjoining apartment, and a moment later a boy rushed in with a drawling cry of "C-e-n-s-o-r!" and threw down upon one of the office tables a bundle of proofs. Mr. A— took them up, glanced hastily through them, and presently handed to me, without comment, a slip containing an editorial article headed, "The Meeting of Delegates from the Volga River Zemstvos.' The tone of the editorial, as a whole, seemed to me perfectly unobjectionable, even from the point of view of the most narrow-minded and conservative bureaucrat; but in the concluding paragraph Mr. A—had made, mildly, meekly, and in timidly cautious words, the suggestion that it would perhaps be well for the delegates from the zemstvos to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded by the meeting to consider some other public questions that were quite as the zemstvos to avail themselves of the oppor-tunity afforded by the meeting to consider some other public questions that were quite as important to the people of the Volga river basin as the cattle plague. Through this paragraph the censor had drawn three or four heavy slanting lines with red ink, and on the margin he had written in crabbed chirography the single word, 'Forbidden.' The prediction of the professor was fulfilled. The 'Daily Gazette' was not permitted to make even so much as a suggestion that the delegates from the zemstvos night, with benefit to the publicythe zemstvos night, with benefit to the public, consider certain other important questions not directly connected with the prevailing epidemic. The government had no objection to the discussion of measures that related exclusively to beasts; but a proposal that the delegates turn their attention to the needs, trials and sufferings of oppressed human beings was a seditious attack upon the sacred privileges of the crown. The cattle plague might properly be abated; but the bureaucratic plague was a special dispensation of 'the Lord's anointed' and must be referred to even as a 'certain other important question.'"

Mr. Kennan gives an account of a Siberian

Mr. Kennan gives an account of a Siberian editor, whose proofs came back from the censor with half the matter struck out. The indignant editor, afraid to make verbal protest, made up his paper with blank spaces representing the forbidden articles. This issue was a silent protest which the Siberians under stood, and the paper was eagerly sought after The police immediately suppressed that issue and collected every paper which had been sent out. The chief director of press affairs telegraphed the editor that "blank spaces in the pages of newspapers are an implied protest against preliminary censorship, and cannot be permitted."

In 1886 great preparations were made for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the emancipation of the serfs, but the celebrations were prohibited by order of the minister of the interior, and newspapers were forbidden to refer to the emancipation act or any of its consequences. The Russian Gazette, of Moscow, unable to voice its sentiments, celebrated the quarter centennial of emancipation by suspending publication for the day.

Rigid as the censorship is it cannot prevent the introduction of forbidden matter, so long as it allows registered letters to go unopened. The Kennan articles in the Century were sent to several persons in registered letters.

This led to the exile of a young Russian. Ivan Petrovitch Belokonski, to whom, on his urgent request, William Kennan had sent his articles. One night the police entered Belokonski's house at 3 o'clock in the morning and searched it. Having found the Century articles they carried the young Russian before an officer for examination, and afterwards put him in prison where he still remains.

The Theatres of Japan. The stage in a country where the artistic faculty is so highly developed as in Japan must be a wonderful institution to westerners. It must also be a unique experience to see mer constantly acting the parts of women, because the Japanese refinement cannot tolerate the idea of having women on the stage.

idea of having women on the stage.

T. J. NaKagawa, evidently a native of Japan, gives an interesting account of the theatre in that country. From it the following interesting extracts are taken:

"It will first be convenient to speak of scenic and mechanical effects, although it must be admitted, at the outset, that these are unquestionably defective in Japan. We have as yet no proper estimate of the importance of pictorial and structural accessories.

"Several months ago, at the Shintomi theater, a new piece was produced, upon the subject of the martyrdom of the early Dutch scholars. The supposed time of year was the end of November, when the leaves turn yellow and are blown off the trees by the least breath of the wind. This also is the season of continuous misty rain. It is evening. The scene reveals a physician's study, which opens upon a small garden entirely exposed to the weather. At the request of Danjiuro, the actor who assumed the principal character, machinery was contrived by which rain was made to fall, and leaves were shaken from the trees as if by the breeze. The slender branches of the willows were seen vibrating to and fro; the fragile bamboo-fence swayed from side to side; the wind was heard moaning and wailing, and the raindrops pattered against the walls of the house and into the pools that side to side; the wind was heard moaning and wailing, and the raindrops pattered against the walls of the house and into the pools that had collected upon the ground. It was a perfectly realistic representation, so far as external effects were concerned. Unluckily it had the result of entirely diverting the attention of the audience from the action of the play. The performer was not, however, deterred from making further experiments. His next appearance was in a historical drama, one of the incidents in which was a destructive earthquake. For the first time in Japanese theatrical history, a house was built upon the stage in fragments, and was thrown to the ground with a colonce and a disorder which startled the beholders into the belief that an actual convulsion was in progress.

pendiders in the deciration of the sion was in progress.

"As regards the accuracy and taste of its wardrobe, the Japanese stage is second to none in the world.
"Although the theory of dramatic art in Japan excuses, and even encourages, indifference to many superficial and external accessories, it is extremely severe in demanding the glosest attention to the illustration of feeling and emotion. Audiences are accustomed to the most subtle and delicate analysis of character and are merchesly exited in self-theacter, and are mercilessly critical in all that relates to the portrayal of human life and

"Do you know what will happen if you attempt anything of that sort?" inquired the professor.

"What?" said the editor, laughing.

"Your newspaper and the "Plague Parliament" will be suppressed before moon tomorrow."

"Do you mean to say," I interposed, 'that a newspaper would not be allowed to make a mere suggestion of that kind in good faith?"

"Certainly it would not,' replied the professor. If happen to know that the governor here has received the strictest orders from the minister of the interior not to allow discussion in the "parliament" to go outside the limits of tion, but in the privacy of their homes, they were accustomed to wear a modified form of feminine dress, to arrange their hair after the fashion of women, and to habituate themselves to the use of those household articles which are ordinarily manipulated by wives and daughters. Their style of living was like that of ladies of high degree. Their theatrical dressing-rooms have been compared, though with considerable exaggeration, to the boudoirs of feudal noblewonen. The lines of study were so carefully sub-divided that one class would devote themselves to the imitation of fair damsels, while another would assume the guise of matrons, selves to the imitation of fair damsels, while another would assume the guise of matrons, and a third would deport themselves like aged dames. These fine distinctions are not at the present day so strictly observed as in preceding generations; and though there are still numbers who address themselves chiefly to the impersonation of women, as their special branch, there appears to be a growing disposition to enlarge their sphere, so as to include the assumption of male as well as female characters.

"Theatrical companies composed entirely of women do already exist in Japan, and their performances are witnessed with more or less curiosity by those who seek variety at the expense of artistic refinement. They are popular to a certain extent among the vulgar, but they can never hope to entertain cultivated amateurs.

"Another striking characteristic of our theatres is the have-michi—literally, "flower-path." This is an open passage extending from the front of the stage to the extreme rear of the anditorium, at the left of the pit or parterre. It is about six feet in breadth, and is elevated two feet above the flooring of the pit, to the level of the shoulders of those who sit in that part of the house. Under certain circumstances this passage is utilized for the entrance and exit of actors. If the character is imagined to have come from a great distance, or if his approach is hurried or precipitate he proceeds to his position on the stage directly through the audience, and his arrival is thus made to appear much more vivid and is thus made to appear much more vivid and life-like than if he had made his way from the side.

According to time-honored custom, a visit to

According to time-honored custom, a visit to the play-house is an affair not of a few hours, but of the entire day. Families or parties of friends take their places early in the morning and remain until nightfall, partaking of refreshments, which are served between acts, or from neighboring restaurants.

"A regular theatrical censorship has been instituted by the present government, and every piece intended for performance in the capital has now to be submitted to the inspection of officers of the metropolitan police. Some extreme purists, like the classical scholar Yoda, have gone to the length of asserting that all love-scenes should be rigorously excluded, and only historical or religious episodes be permitted. It is true that the latitude of love-making, which is recognized as natural and becoming in western countries, would not be legitimately possible with us in real life, as Japanese society is now constituted. Young people are not permitted to meet and converse unreservedly, and the growth of affection is never sanctioned until after a formal betrothal. More commonly it is kept in restraint until the actual ceremony of marriage is performed. Ardent and passionate demonstrations would therefore either have no meaning, or would be suggestive of a licentious disregard of social laws. The tender attachment of husband and wife; the boundless devotion of children to parents; the fervent and self-sacrificing loyalty of the servant to his master—all these may be depicted with the utmost intensity of feeling; but it is only in the illustration of loose intrigue or illicit intercourse that amatory scenes are reprein the illustration of loose intrigue or illicit intercourse that amatory scenes are repre-

MESSAGES IN CIPHER.

O wondrous, matchless melody That fills the earth, and air, and sea! Thou art the song the masters heard And saved for us some meager word; And if that word so thrilleth me. Must then must thy full chorus be!
And if a note from nature caught
Is never lost, and dieth not,
How marvelous the sweep must be
Of thy eternal symphony!

No sage or seer explains to me
The tidings of that senant sea,
Nor tells me what the ocean saith,
When, like the wrath of Allah's breath,
It breaks upon the beetled shores
And batters down a nation's doors.
And who unfolds the story told
By the blue of the sky, or the green of the world?
Or the plaint of the lonesome pine on the fill?
Or the answer that comes from the elm by the mill?
Or the secret that lives in the sounding shell
Where the island stays the breakers' swell? No sage or seer explains to me The tidings of that senant sea,

They have a cipher sweeter far Than human speech and music are; What is that Runic sign, O seer? Their voices reach my 'wildered ear, And I have heard the message pass From haughty oak to trembling grass; Have seen the rose-bud blueh with pride, And Andes shake his hoary side.

What saith the wind, as all night long It cries as one that suffers wrong? What saith it when from out the south It comes with fragrance in its mouth? What message beers it from the throne of him whose realm? the ice-bound zone Who'll tell me what the bluebirds sing Through all the days of laughing spring, or read to me the ancient lay The ring-dove saith alway, alway?

Their speech was old when Aryan tongue Its first imperfect accents sung,
And still we live when human speech
Is but an echo on Time's beach.

The Women of the French Salons. That rare equipoise of well cultivated facul-ties which makes up the charming personage of a gifted society woman, infinite in grace and tact, has often been written about, and almost every man who mourns for his awkwardnes has seen some remarkable instance of her gare gifts, but few understand and still fewer acquire her accomplishments.

Such a woman can inspire a man to almost anything, if only there is in him the metal to take the temper of inspiration. The French woman is possessed of these qualities in pre-take the temper of inspiration. The French woman is possessed of these qualities in preeminent degree, and to her Amelia Gere Mason pays this high tribute:

"The Gallic genius is eminently a social one, but it is, of all others, the most difficult to roproduce. The subtle grace of manner and the magic of spoken words die out like the sparkle of champagne. The flavor is gone with the moment. Hence, after the lapse of more than two centuries, it is not easy to catch the spirit of the early salons nor the nameless attraction of the women who gave tone to them. They were not faultless; indeed, some of them were very faulty. Nor were they remarkable for learning, though quite above the average of their time. But they had rare intellectual appreciation, and the peculiar social gifts which genius, nursed in the library or apart from the world, is apt to lack. It finds its best expression in other channels. The close study of books leads to the knowledge of man rather than of men. It tends also towards habits of introspection, which are fatal to clear and swift vision. A distinctively social talent implies the happy poise of character and intellect, the blending of many gifts, not the supremacy of one. It implies taste and versatility, with fine discrimination, and the tact to sink one's own personality as well as to call out the best in others. It was this flexibility of mind, this active intelligence, tempered with sensibility and the native instinct of pleasing, that distinguished these French women. It is not sufficient to be wise, it is necessary also to please,' said the witty and penetrating Ninon, who very aptly condensed the feminine philosophy of her race. She revealed, too, the secret of their personal influence and social power, the indefinable something which is as difficult to analyze as the perfume of a rose."

It was such a woman who attracted about her a coterie, whose influence was feared and their opinions sought by the great Cardinal Richelieu. Of her this writer says:

"It was to the refinement

Italy by Marie de Medicis, the prevailing tone of the court was low and vicious. The position of women was distinctly inferior. The intellectual atmosphere which surrounded the brilliant but unscrupulous Marguerite de Navarre had not been without its influence, and there were a few, in the solitude of the remote chateaux, who had more or less love of literature as it came to them. "The very women and maidens aspired to this praise and celestial manna of good learning," said Rabelais. But they were mainly limited to his own unsavory satires, to Spanish pastorals, lieentious poems, and their books of devotion. At this time the woman of pure character and fine intelligence appeared, whose position enabled her to create a social center of sufficient attraction to focus the best intellectual and moral life of the age, and sufficient power to radiate its light. But it was the tact and discrimination to select from the wealth of material about her, and quietly to reconcile old traditions with the freshness of new ideas, that especially characterized Mme. de Ramboullet."

I vex me not with brooding on the years
That were ere I drew breath: why should I then Distrust the darkness that may fall again
When life is done? Perchance in other spheres—
Dead planets—I once tasted mortal tears.
And walked as now among a throng of men,
Pondering things that lay beyond my ken,
Questioning death, and solacing my fears.
Who knows? Oftimes strange sense have I of this,
Vague memories that hold me with a spell,
Touches of unseen lips upon my brow,
Breathing some incommunicable bliss!
In years foregone, O Soul, was all not well?
Still lovelier life awaits thee. Fear not thon!

A Study of Consciousness. Under this head Dr. H. C. Wood has an ex ceedingly interesting article in the May Century. He mentions a number of cases where persons performed the ordinary actions of life in a state of unconsciousness.

Several of them showed what he calls a double consciousness—a kind of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence. Persons seized with sudden pain lose conscious-ness, and awake afterwards without any recollections of their past lives. Everything is as if it were blotted from their brain. The alphabet has to be learned anew with everything from the a b c of life. Finally the pain comes again and the person wakes to her own self, conscious of what she had been in early life conscious of what she had been in early life and unconscious of what she had learned after the first transition "The number of cases of double consciousness on record is not great," says Dr. Wood, "but sufficient to establish their existence beyond cavil. In one life a woman has been quiet, contented, domestic, virtuous, while during the other period she has been full of wickedness and unchastity. When in this case the consciousness of the good state was forced to recognize the fruits of the evil-doing of the had state, the woman was dumfounded with horror. These cases of double consciousness are inexplicable. There is, of course, a sharp break in memory, but there is more than this: there is a total change in character, in modes of thought, in habits of action; a new being seems to have sprung into existence.

"If memory alone be abruptly cut off, the results are different. The sense of personal identity which we all have depends upon the recollection of a practically unbroken series of events connected with ourselves. If such recollection be lost, the person does not know his own identity. Simple abrupt loss of memory involves only loss of the sense of personal identity.

"During the centennial exhibition a big, burly Scotchman was brought to the hospital unconscious from sunstroke. I plunged him into a mass of slush and water and piled great masses of ice about his head. As he gradually the solution of the state of the struggled back to consciousness, his first sense struggled back to consciousness, his first sensa-tion was that he was packed away in an ice-box and doomed. For four days that man lay in the answer For four days that man lay in the hospital, apparently perfectly rational, won-dering who he was. "Some years ago in one of our southern cities a man was seized by the pelice and taken to a hospital, where he told the following story: I know nothing who I am or where I came from. All I know is that I found myself on the railroad platform a short time ago. I then drifted into a hall and heard a temperance lecture; goaded into fury by the eloquence of the speaker, I rushed out and began to smash the windows of a neighboring drinking-saloon; a consequent attack on me by the roughs led to my arrest by the police and my being brought to the hospital. That is all I know; who I am I cannot tell." At the time of the publication of the report of this case the hospital authoritles had not found out who the man was.

"Before phenomena like these science it dumb. Merely in the presence of ordinary everyday consciousness, without voice is that science which can drag from the bowels of the earth "We take a little mass of living matter. We call it protoplasm. We notice that it is remulous with self-endowed motion. We find that it is almost structureless, containing only some little shapeless granules. We analyze it in the chemist's retort, and it is carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen. And now we say we know it abnet how are these elements grouped together that out of their dead atoms should spring molecules endowed with the greatest power of all powers—the power of knowing?

"The beginning of a man is a speck of protoplasm, a formless particle. One such little mass is to us indistinguishable from its fellows; each its structureless, yet within each are the records of innumerable generations manifold to come. One shall come forth a monster of wickedness; cut of another a savior of mankind. Yet to us all of these beginnings are precisely alike. Theodore O'Hara. Theodore O'Hara, the gallant and gifted Kentuckian, whose immortal lines, "The Bivouac of the Dead," are used to mark the last resting-place of both the federal and con-last resting-place of both the federal and confederate dead, was a veteran of two wars having fought in the Mexican war, and during the war between the states on the side of the confederacy. Of O'Hars and his poem, Robert Burns Wilson beautifully says:

"These lines, together with the other stanzas of the poem in which they occur, may be seen in the national cemeteries of the United States, cast in iron and placed along the silent ways which wander among the dead, to commemorate the sleeping brave of north and south alike; and these four immortal lines, which have shifteed to secure their author's name a place in the sacred annals, are inscribed also over the gateway of the national cemetery at Washington. Though the man who wrote them fought upon the opposing side even to the end, these lines seem no whit less fitting here than when we find them placed above the wearers of the gray who rest in the cometery at New Orleans. Thus does the apirit of pocaytriumph over the material issues, appealing to something within us before which mere dincrences of political opinion, strong and abiding as they seem to be, sink out of sight and are lest forever. Theodore O'Hara, born at Danville, Ky.,

February 11th, 1820, son of Kane O'Hara, an trish gentleman who left the mother country on account of political oppression, and after-wards became a distinguished educator in Ken-tucky. Having graduated with honor at a Kentucky college (Bardstown) he practised law awhile and then went into the treasury ser-vice. In 1846 he was appointed a captain in the United States army and went to the Mexican war, in which he was breveted major for gallantry. When Lopez attempted to liberate Cuba, O'Hara left his country, like Byron, to fight for the liberty of struggling patriots in another, and led a regiment at the battle of Cardenos, where he was severely wounded. He joined the confederate army at the beginning of the war, and commanded the fort at the entrance of Mobile bay, bravely defending it until he was ordered to retire. He then served on Albert Sidney Johnston's staff, and was with him when he fell at Shiloh. Afterward he was made chief of staff to General John C. Breckinridge, and served in that position to the end of the war. Then he engaged in business in Columbus, Ga., and finally settled on a plantation on the Alabama side of the Chattahoochee, where he died of fever on June 7, 1867. The Kentucky legislature in 1873 made provision for carrying his remains to his native state, and in 1874 he was laid to rest among his comrades of the Mexican war at Frankfort. The lines which made him mmortal were written for the occasion when the dead heroes of the Mexican war were buried there, and O'Hara stood upon his future resting place and read the poem which was to become his epitaph. There he sleeps at the foot of the soldiers' monument, with the guns of Buena Vista standing like grim sentinels round the bivouac of the dead. Of O'Hara's personality, the Poet Wilson

Of O'Hara's personality, the Poet Wilson says:

O'Hara's personality, the was genial and generous in disposition, and possessing a mind well stored, both from books and with the experiences of an adventurous life, he is said to have been exceedingly happy and brilliant in conversation, having a clear sense of humor, a nimble wit, and a quick tongue at repartee. He was the life and soul of many a camp-fire circle in the wars, and the many varied incidents of his life which cannot be given here, for lack of space, all show him to have been utterly fearless. His impulsive and daring nature made him thirst continually for the excitements of danger, and gave him relish for the chances of the fight. Sensitive and refined himself, his manner towards others, while characterized by an inherent, self-respecting pride, was sufficiently unreserved and hearty, and without the tinge of any belittling vanity or shadow of ostentation. He was something above the medium in statue, slender, graceful, and well proportioned in figure, very erect and military in his bearing, and quick, wiry, and decisive in his movements. His hair was black, jet black, and his eyes so nearly so that there was but a shade of difference. They were full of alert intelligence, indicating in every glance the vital force and restlessness of his nature. His nose was straight and his mouth was somewhat small; the lips, seeming always close pressed together or slightly "pursed," were almost feminine in their clearness and delicacy of outline, but showed great firmness and deleacy of outline, but showed great firmness and determination as well as refinement. His head was nicely poised and well set on his shoulders, and his hands and feet were very small and well cared for. He died seemingly unconscious of his highest girt, his greatest fault being his neglecting to follow steadily some definite aim—if that be a fault. Since then the hand of time, grappling for hidden treasure amidst the ruins of lost and buried incident and circumstance, has saved from the we

THE SPECTATOR.

Dr. Henry M. Field, the editor of the New York Evangelist, came south last fall, and topped at most of the cities between New York and Jacksonville. At the Ponce de Leon hotel, St. Augustine, he was the guest of Mr. Flagler, and his description of the hetel and the town is quite enthusiastic. To Mr. Flagler, also, he dedicated the diary of his south sojourn, which was printed under the name of "Bright Skies and Dark Shadows."

Always an entertaining writer, Dr. Field in-Astways an entertaining writer, Dr. Field invests the common-places of a railway journey with interest, and picks out here and there along the route things that put him and his readers to thinking. His reference to the Philadelphia tabernacle is interesting, and the allusion to his brother's home at Washington quite pardonable. He stops to chat with Dr. Park at Knoxville, and philosophizes on the failure of Longstreet's charge At Atlanta, he stops to see Mr. Grady, and in entertained by him at home. This offers an opportunity for a eulogy, written before Mr. Grady's death, and a later obituary note. Both going and coming, he speaks of the Inmans as of familiar friends, and Atlanta is alluded to as the place which interested him most of all.

Like most northerners Dr. Field is inclined to attribute every good thing he sees to north-ern influence—a little piece of egotism which seems to permeate the entire population north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. He calls Atlanta a southern city with northern energy. The superficiality of this view was many times demonstrated by Mr. Grady in editorials and articles on "Atlanta, the Cracker City." He showed by the census and by other substantial evidence that Atlanta is the product of southern energy, and is most'y populated by southern people, though north living have always been warmly welcomed.

Dr. Fields fills a good many pages with his views on the negro question. He first objects to the colonization idea, which he calls expatriation, and brings up against it arguments which have been very generally used in the south. Like a great many northern men who appear to be intelligent on other subjects, but painfully obtuse on this, Dr. Field has adopted the idea of Dr. J. L. M. Curry, that "there is nothing per se in a white skin." If centuries of civilization are to be ignored, and it is imagined that the schooling of one generative with the control of th ation can lift them to the level which it has taken the Caucasions the life of the world to attain, then there is no pretense of considering the matter broadly or from the stand point of experience and common-sense. Until those who undertake to solve the race problem those who undertake to solve the race problem are willing to work on the basis of fact and take things as they find them, there will be little progress. They might as well go into an army and try to reduce to ranks those officers who, by training and natural fitness, have won the best places. It is with races as with men. Some must excel, and in the long race of centuries the leaders must far outstrip the hindmost. The attempt to reduce all races to the same level is about as reasonable, and will be about as successful as the communists' attempt to reduce every man to the same circumstances and give the same rewards to idleness as to industry, the same to incapacity as to efficiency. This book, which is moderate in tone but extreme in opinion, has been the text for numerous articles, several of which are more or less abusive and slanderous of the south. The Evangelist prints without dissent from its opinion, the New York Tribune's review of Dr. Field's book, an article in which the honest peasantry of the south, whom the Tribune contemptuously calls "poor whites," is maliciously described as a class steeped in vice and degradation.

The weekedness of such slanders is not reciously described as a class steeped in vice and degradation.

The wickedness of such slanders is not reproved by this minister of the gospel who has had abundant opportunity to see that it is a lie. Perhaps it is to be expected that in a portion of the country where the curse of plutocracy is greatest and the infernal force of gold is most potent, the poor but honest yeomanry should excite no feeling but that of contempt, but so long as there remains any virtue in the American people they will respect the honest man of high or low estate. And here those who talk contemptuously of poor whites might take a timely warning from the oft quoted but ever appropriate admonition of Goldamith:

Deposited with the Lowry Banking Co., of Atlan ia, Ga., which I will promptly pay to any one who will disprove any of the following statements:

This means just as it reads. The following persons are all reliable. I have hundreds of other statements similar to these in my office:
Colonel Wash Roach, attorney-at-law, 132 Broughton street, Savannah, Ga., says that he has for five years suffered with severe stricture and ulceration of the rectum. After having tried many of the most eminent physicians in Georgia, and having traveled nearly all over the country in search of health, I found no relief until I put myself under Dr. W. J. Tucker, and in the short space of three moths I find myself nearly well.

Mrs. H. P. Stevens, an estimable lady of Waycross, Ga., says: Five years ago I was given up to die by the best physicians of southeast Georgia, all of whom said I could not live but a few weeks. As the last resort I determined to try Dr. W. J. Tucker, of Atlanta, Ga. In less than three months the doctor had me restored to health. I am confident I would have died had it not been for his marvelous skill.

W. H. Phillips, Simsboro, La., says: I have suffered for ten years with liver disease and coronic diarrhoea, and after being treated by Dr. W. J. Tucker a very short time am almost entirely well.

Dr. Fred B. Palmer, Atlanta, Ga., one of the best known and most ropular druggists of Georgia, and also himself a physician, suffered for many years with piles, was cured by Dr. W. J. Tucker and remains perfectly well.

Mrs. J. F. Kinsey, Camak, Ga.: Spinal disease, nervous prostration and diseases peculiar to her sex, confined to her bed, helpless for many months, treated by Dr. W. J. Tucker three or four years ago, and since that time has been able to attend to her household duties.

Mrs. J. H. Seme, Dawson, Ga., says: I have experienced the most remarkable benefit from Dr. W. J. Tucker's treatment, gained fifteen or twenty pounds in the last few months. I advise all suffering ladies to give him a trial.

Hon. E. E. Foy, Egypt, Ga., says ne suffered for many years with a chronic malady, was cured by Dr. W. J. Tucker three years ago, and loses no opportunity to tell the afficited of Dr. Tucker's skill.

The above statements are all true, no sane man would publish them if they were not, and if you do not bestisfy yourself. I treat successfully chronic diseases and weaknesses of both sexes. I treat all who have dealings with me honestly and conscientiously. I am responsible for what I say and do, professionally, financially and individually. If you are afflicted write to me or cail and you shall have an honest ominion.

The officials of China are notoriously corrupt. It is astonishing how the government gets along as well as it does, carrying such a load of official dishonesty and corruption. The young emperor is taking hold of some of the abuses in his empire, with the evident intention of righting them. His catiticism of these abuses is direct and searching, and are given to the public in the Pcking Gazette, The daily News of Shanghal has recently given us not only translations from this government paper, but also several able editorals on the emperor's present policy. The facts in this letter are gathered largely from this source.

Prominent among the abuses denounced by the emperor, it shat in connection with the lovy of the grain tax throughout the empire. The theory is that all the land in the empire belongs to the emperor': lis frequently spoken of as the "Emperor's land"—and the grain tax is considered as the rent paid by the possessor. The officials of the provinces whose duty it is to collect this tax, are constantly sending up reports of divers calamities, on account of which they pray that the tax may be remitted, or the collection postponed, and remissions of this kind are being constantly granted. The rule is that when such remission is granted, a copy of the edict shall be posted in the district concerned, for the information of the people. EDITORS CONSTITUTION:—The young emperor of China is just now causing some trouble and uneasiness to many of the officials throughout his empire. Though but a young man he shows great familiarity with the affairs of the state, and with the methods of the state, and with the method of the state, and with the methods of the state, and with the method of the state, and with the methods of the state, and with the method of the state, and with the state and the s in the empire, the poor as well as the rich, and whereby the best talent of the country is diswhereby the best talent of the country is discovered, and charged with the affairs of the

is very strict, and makes every provision for their fairness. Each student is required to be shut up alone in a small room or cell, before entering which he is duiy searched, lest he should have concealed on his person books or manuscript to aid him in writing his essay. After the essays are completed, they pass into the hands of clerks, who copy off each one earefully before it goes to the examiners, lest the judges, recognizing the handwriting, might be tempted to give a partial judgment. Time and again it has been hinted that there were abuses in these examinations, and that incompetent persons managed to pass successfully through the carelessness and corruption of the examiners and the copying clerks. The existence of these abuses has been pointed out by a censor to the emperor, and they are recognized by him. He calls on those who are responsible for the conduct af the examinations to see that the copying of the essays is honestly and accurately done, and that books of reference in small type are not brought into the cells by the candidates. It is notorious that covered, and charged with the affairs of the rather to be charged to the tender mercies of China's paternal government. There can be no doubt as to this deterioration, and one serious result to China is, that it opens the door to India competition. The demand for Chinese tea has fallen off greatly, while there has been a largely increased sale of the India product. A glance at the figures given in the trade reports make this fact very clear. In 1887 China exported 290 million pounds of tea, while India and Ceylon but a little over eighty millions; but in the past year China's export has fallen to 214 millions, while that of India and other countries has risen to 160 millions. Moreover, during the past year Chinese tea was sold in foreign markets at a great loss—the year was a most disastrous one both to the foreign exporter and the native dealer. Many fortunes were lost, and in consequence suicides were rather prevalent among native Chinese tea merchants.

fortunes were lost, and in consequence suicides were rather prevalent among native Chinese tea merchants.

This tea question has been a prominent one here for some time, and several years ago, many of the most experienced merchants, after an exhaustive inquiry, recommended the reduction of the heavy taxation to which tea was subjected, as the only means likely to preserve trade. The tax that exported teas is required to pay the Chinese government, amounts to about 40 per cent on their average value. Chinese tea, handicapped by this oppressive burden, cannot keep up in the race with the duty-free teas of India and Ceylon. Yet though this tax is ruining the most important trade of China, the government has made no move to remit it, and it is a curious fact that the Chinese inspector-general of customs, Sir Robert Hart, an Englishman, in his report for 1888, ignores the recommendation of the tea merchants, and insists upon the tax. This burdensome tax, not only hinders China in competition with Idnia, for the world's trade, but tends directly to deteriorate the Chinese tea itself. Having to meet this heavy tax, the "country manufcaturers can only afford to pay the grower a trifle for the raw leaf, knowing that the foreign buyer, in turn, will only pay him for his tea a price at which it can compete with the duty-free Indian. The result of this is, that as the grower of the leaf can now barely make a living out of it, he has nothing to expend in replanting his shrubs, or manuring and pruning his old ones, as he is being constantly advised to do. In fact it would seem that the owners of the once flourishing tea plantations, of China, are forced to let their plants go to ruin; no encouragement being given to improve the growth, and in many districts absolutely grubbing up their tea plants and replacing them with bamboo." Consequently the quality of the yield deteriorates year by year. If this burdensome tax was removed then, as the daily News well says, "the peasant proprietors of the tea plantations might be induced tea merchants.

This tea question has been a prominent one

The Story of the Increase in Five Years.

A STORY WORTH READING

The Figures Show a Wonderful Increase, and Argue the City's Healthy Condition.

The best proof of a city's prosperity is to be found in the steady and healthy growth of its banking business.

And here, as everywhere, Atlanta shows to the front.

During the past five years, and especially during the past two years, there has been a great increase in the banking capital of Atlanta, and the banks all do a good business.

THE CONSTITUTION presents today figures showing this growth. The bank statements of five years ago are compared with those of today, and in every case the increase is most gratifying, There are many smaller institutions doing a good legitimate business about which no definite figures could be obtained, but these figures from the regular bankinghouses serve to show the increase and the general prosperity.

Of the institutions named in the list here given, the Neal Loan and Banking company, the Capital City bank, the Atlanta Trust and Banking company, the American Trust and Banking company and the Traders' bank which it absorbed, and the Southern Banking and Trust company are not yet five years old.

Five years ago Atlanta's banking capital was $850,000. Today it is more than $2,500,000. In round numbers, the increase of banking capital in Atlanta during these five years has been $1,700,000.

Five years ago the figures on surplus were $350,000, now the total is $800,000.

The total surplus shows an increase of $450,000. The loan add discount total then was $2,400,-

000: now the total is $6,700,000. The loan and discount increase in the banks here given reaches the sum of $4,300,000. Five years ago the deposits at the banks were $2,000,000; now they reach $6,600,000.

And the total of deposits shows the marvelous increase of $4,600,000. It is only by a study of such figures as these that the enormous growth of the banking business can be realized. This growth is, of itself, evidence that the banks are prospering. There is at all times a good demand for money, "And that," added Mr. Currier, in discussing the matter, "means that business is good. When you find a city in which money brings a good rate of interest, you find a city that is prosper-

The staten ents of the different banks will be read with interest. Here they are:

The Atlanta National Bank.

The Atlanta National is the oldest national bank in the cotton states, and probably the most successful. The history of this bank would be an excellent history of the growth and progress of Atlanta. The last annual statement shows deposits of more than $1,700,-

I asked Mr. Currier, cashier of the Atlanta National bank, about the increase in the last five years. - He said that in the last two years the business of the bank had nearly doubled. Of five years ago he said: "I suppose that we had an average deposit of about $600,000, and a loan and discount account of about the same amount. Now our deposits are nearly three times that amount."

The statement of the Atlanta National for December 31, 1889, shows: Capital stock of $150,000; circulation, $45,000; surplus and million dollars; probably nearer the latter undivided profits, $224,322.45; loan and discount, $1,282,146.44.

The Merchants' Bank.

"In the last five years," said Mr. Farrar, cashier of the Merchants' bank, "our surplus, and everything else, has increased at least, I should say, fifty to one hundred per cent. I cannot quote the exact figures, because I have no statement of five years ago, but I am certain that what I have said about the increase will be about the fact."

Later on Mr. Farrar found a statement of the Merchants' bank for December 31st, 1884, which showed: Capital stock, $200,000; surplus, $77,000; deposits, $469,000; loan and dis-

The statement of this bank for January 1st, for the present year, shows a surplus of $143,000, discounts $673,418 and deposits $884,127.

The Gate City National Bank. The capital stock of the Gate City National bank is $250,000. In April, 1885, the statement shows: Surplus and undivided profits, $83,540; deposits, $331,- 417: loans and discounts. $378.688. For April this year the surplus is $75,165, the decrease being due to the transfer of the building account from surplus to a separate account. The deposits as shown by this state-ment are $864,440; the loans and discounts, Lowry Banking Company.

Five years ago the Lowry Banking company was known as the banking house of W. M. & R. J. Lowry. Two years ago it was changed to the present cempany.

In 1885 the capital stock was $100,000; surplus, $220,000; loans and discounts, $400,000; deposits, $400,000.

The statement for January 31st, 1890, for the present bank shows: Capital stock, $300,000; surplus, $54,000; loans and discounts, $866,-000; deposits, $1,112,000.

The Bank of the State of Georgia. The Bank of the State of Georgia, of 1885 and 1890, shows: Capital stock, of course the same, $100,000; in 1885 the surplus was $70,now it is $160,000; in 1885 deposits were $157,000, in 1890 $245,500; five years ago the loans and discounts figured up $300,000, now they reach $414.535. The Neal Loan and Banking Company was started in January 1887. Early reports show the deposits from $150,000 to $200,000, and the loans and discounts of about $200,000. Now the capital stock is $100,000, surplus $110,000, dividends $50,000, deposits $697,418, loan and discounts $703,165.

The Capital City Bank.

The Capital City bank began business the first of January, 1888, with a capital stock of $400,000. The early reports show the surplus of $40,000; deposits, $135,370. The bank statement for April 15th, 1890, shows a surplus of $77,500; loans and discounts, $720,967; deposits, 05,649.

Atlanta Trust and Banking Company. The Atlanta Trust and Banking company has been in existence as a bank only since September, although the company has had its organization for about two years. The capital stock is $150,000, all of it paid in; surplus, $60,000; loans and discounts, this covering a period of two years, $1,500,000; deposits, $155,000.

The American Trust and Banking Company The Traders' bank began existence in November, '88, and in January, Captain James R. Wylie was appointed president. The capital stock was $100,000. A month ago, this was consolidated with the American Trust and Banking company, which had a capital stock of $400,000. The consolidation is known as the American Trust and Banking company, and has the capital stock of two company, and has the capital stock of two companies combined, $500,000.

"Our company," said President J. W. English, "began business on April 2d, just a month ago. Of course you can't say that we are fairly started as yet. Our deposits? Well, they are $250,000, and our loan and discount recent it as to 200. account is $400,000.

Maddox, Rucker & Co. "In 1885," said Mr. Peel, of the banking firm of Maddox, Rucker & Co., "our capital stock was $50,000; now it is $100,000. Our loans and discennts then footed up $175,000, as against $225,000 today. Our deposits were $190,000; now they are $300,000. The Southern Banking and Trust Company. This is the latest banking company to take its place as a competitor for the business of Atlanta and Georgia. Mr. J. H. Porter is president, Mr. H. M. Atkinson, vice-president and Mr. George R. DeSaussure is eashier. This bank was organized February 26,1889,as the Home Loan and Banking company, at Atanta, with a capital of $125,000. The name was changed by an act of the legislature, and owing to the demand for money and the increasing prospects for business, the capital stock of the company was raised to $200,000, which was promptly taken as soon as offered, and will be paid in on May 10th, 1890. This company is organized with the strongest capi-talists of Atlanta and Boston as stockholders.

Capital paid in April 26, 1898, $92,290; loans and discounts, $127,204.89; undivided net profits, $10,500.

There are Others. This list does not include the private bank J. H. & A. L. James and a number of the maller banking institutions, especially the an and savings banks. There are a number of smaller organizations on the building and oan association plan, which will greatly swell the bank capital of the city.

"In the last year," Captain James R. Wylie, in talking upon this subject said, "There has been an increased capital of at least $1,000,000, and the year 1890 will show an increase in deposits of $1,000,000, I should say, over 1889. Carefully prepared figures show that in the two years previous to January 1889, the surplus of the banks had increased $270,000, and the deposits, which showed ar increase of something like $2,500,000, had doubled in that time."

There are a great many smaller companies which ought to be included in this list, but which it is hard to get exact figure on. These are the banking companies which are accumulating their capital on monthly installments. The Merchants and Mechanics' Banking company for instance; The Atlanta Banking com-pany about $200,000; the Exchange Banking company, the German Loan and Banking company, the Germania Loan and Banking company, and between twenty and thirty building and loan associations, whose aggregated capital cash actually saved and invested in homes mast be nearly two million dollars. Added to to this should be the Atlanta Home Insurance company, with capital and assets of about $300,000, and a number of other companies that loan money, especially upon real estate security.

The Building and Loan Associations. An article on the banking capital of Atlanta would not be complete without something more than a mere mention of the building and loan associations—the city's home builders.

me time ago THE CONSTITUTION told the story of the growth of these institutions. It is a story full of interest to everybody, for it is the story of Atlanta's growth. No one factor has had so healthful an influence upon the people, and none other can boast of such monuments to its efficiency.

The figures given above show the great growth of the banking institutions. Into those calculations nothing but the banks proper enter-there is nothing to show the vast amount of capital used by the building and loan associations. A conservative estimate million dollars; probably nearer the latter figure than the former. The greater part of the building and loan growth has been within the past five years, and the amount of capita employed might with propriety be added to the total increase as shown above.

But isn't the showing good enough without

Written for The Constitution.

The Mississippi was out of its banks; as far as the eye could see was a wild waste of waters; levee after levee had broken, and the country for miles was being submerged, and the people flying for their lives in skiffs, in boats, in anything that would stand the rapid current of the deep waters.

The Point du Lac levee broke, and the swirl.

ing of the waters as they rushed in roused John Lawton and his family from their slumbers. All was darkness, and they waited anxiously for daylight to see the damage that was done, listening as they waited to the sullen rush of the waters as they approached.

With day a sad enough sight awaited them;
the face of the country was covered by the floods, where yesterday were smiling fields and lovely groves, was now a waste of waters.

Soon to his horror Mr. Lawton found that all his boats were gone. Wild with fright the negroes on the place had seized upon every boat and hurried off in them; naught was left but one leaky skiff that had been hauled up for repairs and so escaped.

Into this cockle-shell John Lawton now stepped to seek for help, after stopping the leaks as best he could.
"John, I cannot bear to see you go off in that thing, it looks like certain death," cried his

"It will be certain death to us all if I stay. Go I must, and at once-there is no time to be

Mrs. Lawton was silenced, as her husband draw his oars through the water, and the boat shot off into the inland sea that surrounded them. She watched it till it became a speck in the distance, and then disappeared from grew oppressive.

"Well," said Marsdon at last, breaking it and Jennie, out on the upper piazza and tried to amuse them, and so calm their terrors, but in spite of all their efforts the day passed "Well, "said Marsdon at last, breaking it, and speaking in a harsh voice, "have you followed me even here?"

"Followed you?" she answered, as his voice broke the spell. "Followed you, when I've been flying from you—from the very remembrance of you; from the life you have desolated, made a curse; fled here to die alone, only to find—you!" heavily and in part very hungrily, as they had saved but little food. But the children bore up bravely, cheered by the governess' sugges-

But at last the governess' spirits flagged and she sat silently gazing out at the waters as they hurried by, bearing away the wrecks of many homes.

"How like my own life," she thought, "all wasted and ruined."

Agnes Dean was hardly twenty; she had only been with the Lawtons a few weeks, having come a stranger from Baltimore in answer to an advertisement for a governess. Her life had been a sad one, for she was an orphan, the poor dependent of rich relations. But at the room, passed up the hall to the next, entered and shut himself in.

Agnes was in a wild tumult; to her mad desperation was added this new feeling of mingled shame and horror to find that when she was flying from him she should appear to be running to meet him! The very thought made her feel hot and sick. She turned to the window and gazed out at the light and tried to pray—to think of what was near at hand. But the man in the next room dragged her thoughts down to earth.

Constantly the last words of his cruel note rose before her, and kept repeating themselves like a bitter taunt: "Thank you for the happy time we have passed together; I will always think of it with pleasure. But as our paths in life lie far apart, I now bid you adieu." So far apart! Oh, cruel fate! to drive them together at the end!

The waters crept higher and higher, but she did not notice them.

Was this the man she had loved with such implicit faith? She shirayed. the hard winter of her life budded forth into blooming spring when a lover came to her, and all was brightness and sunshine. He deserted her, and darkness covered the face of the earth. In her anguish she wished she had nover been born; that she was dead; that it was not wrong to kill oneself. She thought she deserved great praise that she resisted the desire to fly into that dark future of which we know nothing. Baltimore became hateful to her, and she eagerly grasped at the opportunity to go away am strangers, hoping never to see her false lover more, and so forget; but she carried her misery with her, and the remembrance of him seemed to dog her footsteps. She wondered how Mrs. Lawton could be so anxious and frantic to live when life was so dark and dreary, and death so sweet. What a pity it was wrong to seek did not notice them.
Was this the man she had loved with such implicit faith? She shivered. At sight of him how had her idol fallen! She had thought him God-like, and she found him clay! She wished that she was dead—that she had never lived!

The children found her a sad companion, and they spent their time trying to distinguish the rafts of logs floating about on the current from the boat they were looking for. The sun was sinking to the west, when at last Jennie called out:
"Yonder is a boat, and I think I see papa!

Come, mama, and look."
"God grant it may be. My heart aches when I think of his risking his life in that crazy egg-shell of a thing," said the anxious

"It is papa, for he is waving his handkerchief." said Annie.

The boat moved slowly through the water.

she was heavily laden, for she contained the family of Mr. Lawton's nearest neighbor, Mr. Panchon, his wife, two children and a guest, Richard Marsdon, who steered the boat while the other two men plied their oars.

had been a favorite amusement of his. The lonely orphan girl in the adjoining room had not been his only conquest. But he had been greatly interested in her. He had felt first amused, then bored at her adoring devotion, and then he had left her.

But now he felt that she had altered; that in this last interview the voil had been rent from her eyes. and that his blind worshipper had risen above him. He had left her feeling very small indeed. As he stood there in the terrible solitude he felt how paltry a part he had played.

The rapid rising of the waters roused him from a painful reverie. The sun had set, but the western heavens were still a blaze of light. No boat hove in sight, and there seemed no hope of one that night, and if the waters continued to rise at this speed no boat would avail them by morning—unless there was some way to get upon the roof.

He searched every door opening upon the hall, and at last found one that disclosed a very steep stairway to the attic garret. By the help of a box of matches he explored this dark room, and discovered a sort of window in the roof. Then, by means of a broken chair and table, he climbed through this opening, and looked around him.

On all sides was a vast expanse of water, the other two men plied their oars.

As the boat neared the piazza, Agnes Dean smd o ly recognized in the steersman her former lover! For a moment she felt dazed, then as all the horrors of facing him, of crowding into that boat with him, of owing him in part the life he had blasted burst upon her, she turned and fled down the hall, taking refuge in one of the back rooms. Never, never would she go! Death, death, a thousand times would she face before him! She shut the door and ran toward the window as if to throw herself out. In the meantime the boat had reached the house and Lawton stepped out upon the plazza. He was quite aware that his entire family sould not get into Panchon's boat, and he anxiously asked: could not get inco-anxiously asked:

"Has Harris come? He was to have taken half the load."

"No," said his wife, "we have not seen him."

"No," said his wife, we have he him."

"What are we to do?" cried Lawton, "for this boat can't possibly hold us all."

Richard Marsdon solved the difficulty.

"Mrs. Panchon, you take my place and steer," he said; "the boat will hold Mrs. Lawton and the two children, and I'll wait for Harris, even if he don't come till morning; I run no danger; this house will stand."

"Where is your governess," asked Mrs. Panchon.

"Where is your governess," asked Mrs. Panchon.
"To be sure," cried Lawton; "Where is she," and he hurried into the house calling, "Miss Dean! Miss Dean!"
But no one answered him. He ran from com to room; at last he found her looking out it a window, "come! come!" he cried.
"I'm not going, said she, without turning.
"Not going?"
"No, the boat is full without me. Don't think of me."

ness. But still, he would not give up whiled a struggle.

"I'll not die like a rat in the hole," thought he. "Air and light to the last. But how about the girl? How provoking she should be there; like one's sins come to hunt one at the end!"

He turned and clambered out the garret and down to the hall below. "'Tis strange, but I mind more facing her than the rising water of hink of me."
Lawton was staggered; this was horrible.
"Come! come!" shouted the boat's crew,

COMPLETING THE CIRCUIT. SMALL Boy, (as the dog-cart comes to a sudden stop.)—"Blest if Romee ain't went and yer pug!"

and he hurried back and laid the case before them.

"She is right, the boat can't hold another soul," said Panchon. "Let her stay with Marsdon till Harris comes and takes them off."

"All right, I'll take good care of her," said Marsdon, smiling. "Push off; no time to waste."

"So I say," said Panchon. "'tis folly teary and travel with this load after dark, and the river full of rafts."

"I don't like it at all," muttered Lawton, following his family into the boat, leaving the girl all by herself.

"She has Marsdon. He is a cool-headed fellow. Couldn't fall into better hands," cried Panchon.

"Thanks," said Marsdon, laughing; "I'll go immediately and see after my ward. Pull lively," he called, "or we'll overtake you in Harris's boat. Now," said he to himself, as booth her.

He triver," he thought, as he shuffled along the dim hall, where the water stood almost knee deep, toward the door of the room in which she had taken refuge.

He tapped; no answer, not a sound, but the low mysterious lap. lap, lap, of the incoming waters. They sounded as if murmuring some story, but Marsdon was in no mood for telling it. Again he rapped, but still no answer.

"What nonsense," he thought, as he shuffled along the dim hall, where the water stood almost knee deep, toward the door of the room in which she had taken refuge.

He tapped; no answer, not a sound, but the low mysterious law in om mood for telling it. Again he rapped, but still no answer.

"What nonsense," he thought, "standing on ceremony at a time like this!" He turned the handle of the door and entered.

Agnes Dean was leaning half way out of the window gazing at the western sky where the gold was melting into pink and silver and reflecting lin the river below, turning, yellow, yellow color into roseate hues. To her that partic-clored stream robbed death of half its horrors, ond she seemed unconscious that the cruel waters had risen almost knee deep.

about her.

Her only thought was to fly away from him—from herself. Oh, when would death come and set her free from the shame, the anguish, the despair which possessed her? Absorbed in these thoughts she heard nothing till a voice at her allow said.

"The water is rising rapidly; we have no time to lose. Come!" She started; then she answered without turn-ing: "I prefer to remain here. I do not wish

"I don't like it at all," muttered Lawton, following his family into the boat, leaving the girl all by herself.

"Thanks," said Marsdon, laughing; "I'll go immediately and see after my ward. Pull lively," he called, "or we'll overtake you in Harris's boat. Now," said he to himself, as he turned back into the house, "I'll go and hunt up my new responsibility."

Lawton gone, Agnes Dean tried to collect her thoughts. At last she would be left alone—oh. blessed thought! and she would struggle to forget that haunting face and try and pray. The red rays of the fast setting sun shone into the window at which she stood; she would have that for company and gaze upon it to the last, till the end came. Then from there to the golden gates would seem but a step. She would no longer fear or feel the cruel waste of waters, she—

Just then a step was heard in the hall: the "That is impossible," said Marsdon, still would no longer fear or feel the cruel waste of waters, she—

Just then a step was heard in the hall; the door opened, and there stood before her the man who had deserted her; the man who had blasted her life; whose cruel blow had made her fly to meet death! She stood transfixed, staring at him with dilated eyes, as if her fancy had played her some horrible trick.

The red light shone on his face and made it swarthier; the red light shone on her fair face and made it fairer; it took away its deadly pallor and gave it a roseate hue; it shone upon the blonde tresses of her hair, and threw a sort of halo around her head.

Marsdon frowned at sight of her, and a muttered oath escaped him, and it was only by an effort of will that he forced his cold gray eyes to meet hers. Neither spoke, and the silence grew oppressive.

"Wall!" said Marsdon at last breeking it That is impossible," said Marsdon, sain standing at the open door, "you will be drowned like a rat in a hole if you stay here."

Back to earth with a plunge. Still looking out of the window, she answered: "I prefer to stay here and die. Let me be."

"That is all nonsense," said Marsdon, angrily. "I do not propose to stay here, and I cannot leave you." cannot leave you."
Goaded by this last speech, she turned and faced him." "You and I have parted forever.

He made an impatient motion. "Don't waste time," he urged.
"Our paths in life are far apart," she answered. "I prefer to stay here."

He recognized the quotation, and had the grace to be heartily ashamed. Closing the door to keep out the fast rising waters, he strode to her side. "If you stay here, so do I," he said.

"I prefer to be alone," still looking out of the window.
"I would scorn to leave you here to die alone. Bad as I am, I am not as bad as that. But I tell you candidly I would much prefer to live."

No answer; her back was resolutely turned to him as she looked out of the window. Not a sound but the soft lap, lap, of the water, telling the story of death.

The pink and silver of the skies faded out; the rosy hues of the river vanished; in the un-certain light of the twilight the landscape be-came misty, confused and hideous. The golden gates of heaven disappeared and earth returned sad and drearyy; and, worse still, the dogged statue at her elbow dragged her back to herself.

In spite of the closed door the chilling waters had risen waist deep. What should she do? Why would he not go? She turned. "Why will you stay?"

"I will not leave you; neither do I wish to

She hesitated. "Come, then," said she, faintly.
"It would have been wiser at the first," he answered, ungraciously, "for now we are soaking wet."

Moving to the bed he hurridely collected an armful of blankets, threw them on his shoulder and turned to leave the room, saying briefly, and turned to leave the room, saying briefly, "come!"

Feeling like one walking in a nightmare, she obeyed. They could barely see their way along till they reached the garret stairs, then all was darkness; up these they stumbled. "Here." said Marsdon, shortly, on reaching the landing, "give me your hand."
He grasped her wrist and groping his way to the sky-light, climbing on the rickety table he threw the blankets outside. Then he helped her on the table, lifted out upon the roof and climbed out after her, she inwardly shivered and recoiled at his touch but submitted in silence.

Just from the blackness of the garret they could dimly see their way in the bright starlight. The house had a hip-root, and on this commodious level Agness stood while Marsdon wrung out her skirts. He did this in grim silence as a sort of tacit reproof to her for her obstinacy in staying so long in the water, and then he carefully wrapped her up in a blanket, after leading her to the highest point on the roof, where he seated her. All this done with a stern solicitude for her comfort, as if to silence some inward reproaches.

On all sides was a vast expanse of water, bearing on its swift current huge masses of drift-wood, uprooted trees, the debris of fences, or fragments of houses, all hurried along by its resistless force. Not a boat in sight, not a sign of help—no hope of it.

Marsdon drew his breath hard between his teath. He was a man who, if crule when She submitted in dumb despair, "The football of fate to the end," she thought. He tucked another blanket about her as she sat, wrapped around him a third, and seated him self a little way from her to watch any chance of escape. They were few indeed, for the night was dark, not till later would the moon rise, and, full of logs and debris, borne along on its swift current, the river would be avoided by boats in the darkness.

Would the house be able to hold out till morning, or would it be undermined? he could not tell; he sat there moodily conjecturing.

Motionless and in profound silence his companion sat gazing upon the stars, and trying to lift her thoughts to the skies beyond.

The hours dragged slowly on. The house remained firm. Marsdon's uneasiness subsided. Yes, it would stand till morning, and then help would come. By daylight Lawton would be there to see after them, and probably Harris, too.

His anxiety relieved, his thoughts were free to wander elsewhere, but they did not go far, but settled, in spite of himself, on the motion-less figure near him. She had changed to him almost as much as he had to her.

In her case her idol had vanished, turned into an image of clay. Her hero had been transformed into a very common-place manvain, cruel, rough. True he was brave; yes, he was not devoid of every virtue, she admitted. During this transformation process she had suffered untold anguish, and the sense of shame and degradation clung to her—that she should have wasted her love on such a one! That he should have treated her so!—she shivered! Oh! misery! misery! Would death never set her free?

Oh! must his be the last face to rise before her—his the last voice to ring in her ears? Must the final struggle and parting be embit-tered by his presence?

By a species of clairvoyancy, caused by acute vanity, Marsdon felt this transformation, and as she changed to her she altered to him. His blind, t

"Are you cold?"
"No."
"Can I do anything for you?"

'Are you perfectly comfortable?"

"Yes."
She had determined to keep silence. Well, let her sulk. No, she should talk, he would not put up with this absurd behavior. What was a little filtration? Hundreds engaged in it every day. It was all nonsense in her to resent it so. Nothing but temper.
"You are angry with me," he went on, "but would you want me to act a lie?"
No answer.

"Would you have cared to be wife?"
"No; I am glad I escaped you."
Oh! this was not what he had expected.
"Then why are you so bitter against me?" he went on, doggedly.
"Because," cried she, roused at last, "you went out of your way to degrade me in myown eyes. What had I done to cause you to think so poorly of sue that you should select me, of all women, to humiliate?"
He was surprised at this view of the subject. "What have you done? Nothing. I did not do it with that intention. Indeed, the truth is, I had no intention. [She winced.] All is fair in love and war, you know."

"True," said she, with the calm of a sudden contempt. "And if in war I had fallen a prisoner into your hands, might would have enabled you to beat me without mercy, but would it have given you the right?"

"You take extreme views," he said.
"Do I?" with a bitter smile. "V' at had I done to you, that you should vo. starily go out of your way to darken my life, to turn all its light to shadow, all its sweet to bitter, all its joy to sorrow. The very world seemed changed, and you and I with it!"

"Changed how?" he persisted.
"I thought you were a hero, and you took infinite pains to prove you were a coward. I thought myself a woman, happy, respected, loved. I found myself not only unloved, but despised, scorned—my most sacred feelings trampled on—degraded, humiliated in my own eyes!" Her voice seemed to vibrate with the intensity of her feelings, and she ceased abruptly.

All was still for some time but the sullen All was still for some time but the sullen surge of the swift current, as it hurried along. The hours dragged slowly by. The terrible solitude seemed greater to Marsdon for the presence of his companion (so near him, and yet so far from him, he felt as if the whole world rolled between them). His thoughts were driven back upon himself, and for once the contemplation was disagreeable. He caught a faint glimpse of his inner self, and was surprised to see how small and mean that inner self was; worse still, he felt that his companion recognized this fact too, also. It was this that had altered her.

As she changed, his respect for her rose. No, he had not treated her right; he had been hard on her. But did he dream she was so sensitive? At last he could stand the silence no longer.

no longer.
"I think," he said, "you exagerate matters."

"Hush; do not speak to me," she answered.
Let my last hours be spent in prayer. Only, when death is upon you, ask yourself if you have been fair to me."

After this he dared speak no more, but sat

After this he dared speak no more, but sat in moody silence.

The moon rose, its gibbous face looking yellow and haggard. In its dim light the swollen, troubled waters of the river seemed wild and wierd. As the moon rose higher by the light of its grotesque face Marsden could see his silent companion. She sat with her hands clasped about her knee; her head raised, gazing heaven ward.

clasped about her knee; her head raised, gazing heavenward.

How she had changed! He would never have known her. His conscience smote him—no, not smote—his conscience was not an active member in his composition; but it quivered, and threatened to awake.

Ah, well! 'twas too late now! They could never be to each other as they had been. No, their lives lay apart. Why should she so resent it? He had but told the truth, and after tomorrow they parted forever. He would be glad when the morning came. Camping out on housetops was a tiresome business. What was that strange noise? That dull sullen roar behind them?

He arose, turned and looked over what had He arose, turned and looked over what had once been garden, orchard and cotton field, but now covered by the overflow. Across this waste of water there came, with a frightful roar, a mighty stream, bearing on its swift current the wreck and ruin of many homes.

At a glance Marsdon took it in; the levee on Bayou Bois behind them had given way, and the waters of the bayou were on their way to join 'the Mississippi, and—yes—great heaven! they were directly on its road! When that mass of rubbish, now hurling on, reached them, they would be swept away!

For a moment the man's heart stood still while he looked about him; now at the wide spread of waters, now at the onrushing stream, now at the moon that seemed to mock him with its distorted face, now at the quiet figure, so unconsclous of danger.

His dead conscience leaped to life and smote with its discrete face, how at he duter lighte, so unconscious of danger.

His dead conscience leaped to life and smote him. Wretch! he had driven her there! In a second that column of water would strike the house and they would be—where?

The brute courage of the man threw off its numbing fear and braced him for one last struggle. He strode towards the girl.

"Agnes," he cried, "all is over with us! The house is going!"

She looked up at him with a smile. "I am ready," she said.

It was the courage of despair, and he had driven her to it.

riven her to it. As she spoke, the onmarching stream struck he house—it quivered, tottered, and gave way eneath their feet.

"Agnes, Agnes, forgive me," Marsdon said, hoarsely, as he caught her in his arms. "If we lived apart, we die together!"

The house sank from beneath them, and

The house sank from beneath them, and they were swept away by the resistless stream. The sun rose bright and clear, and Lawton, with a boat manned by two strong rowers, came betimes to the rescue. But the house was gone. Nothing to mark where it stood but the upper limbs of a grove of trees, beaten to and fro of the cruel current. The house was gone, and its occupants were-

Miles away, caught amid the drift-wood and the limbs of low-growing trees that fringed the banks of the overflow, the two were found. Tightly locked in Marsdon's arms Agnes floated on the water, with a placid smile on her face. She had found the peace she had been seek-

FAIR WOMAN AND HER WORLD.

The Spinster Is Discussed at Some Length.

SEVERAL SPECIES DESCRIBED.

How Miss Bisland Was Received at New Orleans-The Original Mrs. Bloomer in Her Costume.

The spinster is the I nely edelweiss of a complex civilization, says a writer in Woman's

She has appeared as it were a spirit in the gardens of civilization—a unique and delicate flower "still blooming alone," an ungathered rose on many an ancestral tree. Now, in earlier and less gracious days this spinster was regarded with frosty tolerance and slightingly spoken of as an "old maid," with an accent of mingled derision and pity. She was treated as if some blight of nature had infected her constitution and impaired her worth. Her rejection of the many offers of matrimony was revenged by the rejected and their confreres in words of scorn and actions of neglect. Her sister women also, even though wretchedly mated, and distracted with a thousand miseries arising from their infelicitous matrimonial ventures, could still cast a pitying reflec-tion towards the scattered sisterhood of the vestals on account of their "single blessedness." And all the world would join in light laughter on reference to their peculiar for-tune, as if, though not their fault, it was still noticeably their misfortune that they were unprotected, and it were better to have been illmated than not mated

But here in the land of personal assertion the spinsters begin to occupy a loftier perch. There are many of them who have large fortunes and therefore have evidently remained unmarried of their own free will, since it is never doubted that the supply of impecunious men, young men and others who are willing to share a large fortune with any woman who has it already, is unlimited. These rich mis-ses have given a social rank to the whole class, which is uncontested. Then it is seen also that many spinsters are the superior women of their generation, line conservatory flowers, the result of the best fearning and culture of their times, patricians in birth and breeding, more fit to look down upon men than to be looked down upon by men.

Not seldom, also, they are what a writer calls "nature syrens"-the belles and favorite of their societies, whose charms outlast many a succession of ephemeral ballroom beauties and count their easy conquests by scores in each succeeding season. Time but enhances the "vivid graciousness" of their manners and charm. Regally they hold their place; true goddesses of society whom marriage would but seem to dislodge from their pedestals and reduce to the estate of less favored mortals. One such I know among the Brahmins, of Boston of whom it was said that the man was never made who was good enough to lead her to the altar of espousal.

Others, too, there are whose devotion to an invalid father or mother has withdrawn from the lists of the marriageble until late in life, leaving them stranded through the excess of their excellence on the sandy shores of a lonely middle age, not so much objects of pity as shrines of devotion and divinities of pure

It is indeed true that one must still contrast these charming and fortunate types with a numerous company of women unplaced, whose whole attractions would but meagerly "set forth the marriage tables," left in the by-ways of life as faded weeds of humanity. They drift about the world.

Prim, upright, scrupulous, spare of form and precise in speech, bearing the traces of a certain disappointment ill-concealed, viewing the world in a bizarre perspective which gives a comic tone to her observatsons, a natural censor of morals, she brushes her way through life with an austere usefulness. Men stand aghast at her vigor and rigor. If she has a ready tongu ethey flee her presence. No male courage dare brave the chastisement of her principles. Her epithets sting like a lash. principles. Her epithets sting like a lash. Her denunciation of vices, to whose temptation she is a total stranger, knows no limits. Her temper is uncertain, and the prudent man treads gingerly among her prejudices. In autocracy she out-popes the pope. She dominates her environment as the wind in a field of ripening wheat. Even her virtues are severe. She generalizes on the half-facts within her range with sublime audacity. The world of men is to her a dark continent haunted by ravening tigers and malicious monkeys. world of men is to her a dark continent haunted by ravening tigers and malicious monkeys.
To her, as George Eiliott says, "men are great, coarse creatures who straddle and spit and swear," the slaves of gross appetites and irrational activities. She revenges their neglect by an aggressive hostility to the whole sex.
She is ready to set them right on every occassion and when they laugh at her counsel, she cannot divine the reason, and only contemns the more.

I once knew a Quaker maiden of some seventy-five years of age, who, as she smoothed down the prim folds of her gray silk gown, used to say that "She thanked God that she had escaped one of the great dangers of life, and that was the danger of matrimony." And in truth she presented in her cheery old age a most pleasing picture. Her sunny temper, her ripened wisdom, her unworried countenance, were greatly to be envied. And withal there was that sense of something like girlhood which is perennial with the spinster, that niceness of attire that somehow suggests the thought of the chance of a still possible lover hiding in the crannies of her fancy, which lent grace and youth to her demeanor. Age cannot wither nor custom stale that quality—the heart of the woman still reaching shyly out towards love and the fruition of love, and though fully convinced of the wisdom of its pinster-hood, still not wholly content with it. But no form of life can secure the enjoyment of the opposite form. We must always choose between advantage and for the realization of much of the richness and variety of the modern world, the spinster has the best of it. Doubtless it is for the best welfare of the race that the most of women should be cunningly trapped, as it were, with matit. Doubtless it is for the best welfare of the race that the most of women should be cunningly trapped, as it were, with matrimony in their earlier years by wily nature, for which they are rewarded in happy instances by the love of husband and children to an unimaginable degree. But what man of reflection can possibly be dead to the fact that he owes many of his pleasantest hours to the racy and tantalizing conversation of some sparkling women who have used the leisure of single life to cultivate their minds without detriment to their womanly graces, and thus have become, like the muses, the unfading types of much that is loftiest and most subtle in humanity. And yet, and yet.

On Monday, March 17th, the Woman's club, of New Orleans, tendered a public reception to Miss Elizabeth Bisland, the founder and first president, who was on a short visit to her southern home.

president, who was on a short visit to her southern home.

Miss Bisland is much beloved in New Orleans, where she began her literary career as a member of the staff of the Times-Democrat. While holding that position she endeared herself not only to the social world, where by right of her lineage as well as graces of mind and person she occupied a prominent position, but also among the workers with whom she so early in life identified herself.

Her home-coming was regarded as an event. Therefore it was fitting that the Woman's club; should make some public demonstration, should offer some testimonial of the love and pride that women should take in each other's welfare and success.

The reception became an ovation. From three to six in the afternoon, the appoir hours, the beautiful parlors, library and broad hallway of the club were thronged with representative men and women. The college and high school boys and girls, who had so eagerly followed her around the globe; the reader and thinker who has watched with interest her travel in the literary world; the society as well as the working side of life, all came to bid welcome and God-speed to the beatiful, gracious southern girl, never more beautiful, never more gracious than on that afternoon when she received the New Orleans public.

She wore a clinging gown of shell-pink India silk, with trimmings of white lace, her soft, waving brown hair carelessly fastened high upon her head with a golden arrow. Her only ornaments—a weeden rosary wound about the right arm, a charmed gift, blessed in St. Roch's chapel, a huge bunch of ferns, white hyacinths and lilies of the valley.

Miss Bisland was assisted through the duties of the evening by her handsome mother, a taleuted musician, her gifted sister, well known in southern journalism, Mrs. J. G. Clark, president, and other officers of the club.

A pretty incident that one is tempted to jot down marked the close of the reception. The dignity of Miss Elizabeth gave way, and with eyes brimming with tears, the last adiou came from sweet Bessie Bisland,

One of the most interesting clubs in Washington is the "Travel" club, so called because ington is the "Travel" club, so called because it travels through all countries by proxy. Its officers are guides, couriers and traveling correspondents. Its sessions are always held at the "Strathmore Arms," a house historic in that it has been the home of General and Mrs. Logan, Vice-President Wheeler, Senator Edmunds, Judge Harlan, of the supreme court, Senator Ingalls, Senator Farwell, Governor Boutwell and hosts of members of the house of representatives. Boutwell and hosts of representatives.

The programme of the evening consists usually of two papers, and the discussions they bring out, and music. Among the noted people who have entertained the club with interesting papers in the nine years of its existence, are General Logan, George Kennan, Olive Logan, Senor Romero, the Mexican minister; ex-Minister Foster, Governor Boutwell, Dr. Chickering, A. E. Spofford, librarian of congress; Mrs. J. W. Foster, Mrs. J. C. Burrows, and Dr. Charles Knight; while it is but just to say that some of the best papers have been given by the working members of the club who are unknown to fame.

The group of pictures contributed by Robert C. Minor to the exhibition at the American Art association is remarkable for its variety, versatility and power. Mr. Minor is a member of the Autwerp association of artists in Belgium, and of the National Academy of Design, New York. His studio in the university is one of the largest in New York city, One of the pictures in this group was painted by the headlight of a locomotive at night. To study dawn Mr. Minor waited for morning in a marsh, with mud and slime up to his arms. This is the realism of art.

It is very fashionable to cover the flowerpot, or vase, holding flowers, with a silk cover, either on the stand or dining-table. Readymade, a number of these are quite an expensive purchase. Home-made, they cost but a trifle, and are easily completed. Take a length, for instance, of willow-green China length, for instance, of willow-green China silk, and a corresponding length of primrose yellow silk, the latter for the lining. Join neatly in the form of an oblong bag, and then put two or three runners about five inches below the top; put your narrow ribbons through this, or an elastic band; place the flower-pot inside, then draw up the runner at the bottom and the one at the top. Allow the full frill thus made to stand up well at the back as it faces you, but in front the broad hem should droop downward its full length, so that the bright yellow lining appears. A large satin bow and ends may be added by way of further embellishmedt. A set of a dozen fine ferns set in "surrounds" such as these recently decorated a wedding breakfast table.

It seems hardly possible for those who delight in gay gowns and colors to go far astray in the matter of dressing this year, as the milliners and dressmakers are at hand to encourage them in this kind of gowning. Everything is bright and brilliant, if not startling. The very quietest combinations of color for walking-dresses and afternoon toilets are what but a few seasons ago would have been deemed suitable only for a dancing party. We seem, however, quickly to become accustomed to all this gorgeousness and gaiety, and after the dreary winter season just past, there is something inspiring of less reining in all this rush of color and military-like display.

But we could see the town in the distance, and a genial drummer called attention to it with a remark about the colonels.

A big public square, bordered with a fringe of trees—wide streets at right angles slumber-ing in the drowsy shade—a few stores, with loungers playing checkers in front of them—a score or so of old-fashioned mansions looming

My mission was of a kind to secure me a friendly welcome, and I soon found myself taking my ease in the shade with several prominent citizens, who were evidently glad to throw off the cares of business for a few

"Certainly, we could have had the railroad," said Colonel Jones, in reply to a ques-tion, "but we knew a thing or two. We knew the railroad would rain the town, lower the tone of our society, bring in a crowd of scrubs, you know, and possibly factories and workshops. It was not to be thought of, sir." "Railreads have made Atlanta," I remarked.

"Um!" said the colonel, "that is a different thing. Bless your soul, sir, it is a very different thing. Of course such cities as Atlanta are needed, and some people, I suppose love to live in them—very nice people, too. I have no doubt—but Nodville is an old town, sir, with its traditions, and a society famous half a century before the first nail was driven in Atlanta.'

I said something about modern progress, and the rapid material advance of the south. "We know all about it, sir," replied Colonel Jones, "the newspapers are full of it. But we are satisfied with the civilization of our fathers. The families here date back to colonial times. They have always lived here, and intermarried, and we don't care to be tangled up with a lot of new-comers whose ways would

"And yet you have a new colony in the county," I said, "a northern settlement."
"Oh, no! A parcel of d—d yankees. If they were northerners it would be all right, but these fellows belong to the other class-they are d-d yankees."

I understood the colonel, and smiled approval. His words were rather emphatic, but he was describing two entirely different classes of immigrants from the same section. "Who lives in that fine old mansion over there?" I asked.

"Colonel Brown-that is the gentleman coming out of the postoffice."
"A quaint-looking house," I continued. "Did Colonel Brown buy it, or build it, or inherit it?" "Well, he just came by it naturally," answered my companion.

"I don't understand." "But you will if you look at Colonel Brown. Look at his head and face and massive build don't you see that the house just fits him?" "So he came by it naturally?"

"Yes, that's the way he got it. I can't imagine him with a house of any other sort. It is just as much a part of his equipment as his head and his nose—they run in the family, and the house goes with them." "Don't you find this quiet existence mo-

"Never. On the contrary, we have too much excitement. If you will look at our weekly paper you will find that Colonel Smith and Colonel Robinson are in the midst of a heated controversy over the states rights ques-tion. It keeps the town stirred up all the "Why not leave dead issues and discuss the race problem?" I asked.

"There is no race problem," the colonel replied. "We have our old slaves and their children. There has been no change in Nod-ville since the war. We have not adopted any new south methods. Society remains the same, and we conduct business in the same "You mean the long credit system?" "Yes, if you put it that way. This is a community of planters. The lawyers, doctors and merchants all have large plantations. We stick to the yearly credit system because we are used to it, and it is the most convenient. There's Wilson over there—I have been buy-ing goods from him for twenty-five years, until this year when I commenced trading with Mason. All that time we got along splendidly. I made him a payment once a year, and he carried over the balance. Last year he let it drop that I owed him a balance of six thousand dollars. He didn't ask for it, of course. He merely mentioned the matter in the most delicate way. Well, I simply told him that I didn't feel like making the account any larger, and asked him if he would feel hurt if I traded with Mason. He hated to give me up, but under the circumstances he consented. So I gave him my notes for the six thousand, and carried my trade to Mason. Yes, we all like our old-fashioned credit system, and are not likely to make a change.'

I made some allusion to the condition of the farmers. "We have piad some forty or fifty per cent interest every year since the war," said Colonel Jones. "At least that is what long-time credits amount to, and as we live under that you will see that farming must pay a pretty 'Still things are not like the good old times before the war."

"No, of course not. But I waste no time in looking backward. We make it a point to stand by our old customs and live in the old "And how does this little village holding itself aloof from all the world entirely escape the pressure of hard times?" Colonel Jones looked very thoughtful for a

"I have never thought much about it," he said slowly, "but I am afraid that a few families here are in straitened circumstances. The matter is never mentioned, but people find it out, and then it is all right. The sufferers are cautious about making purchases, and the merchants understand it. The accounts then are simply booked, and the bills are never sent in. That's the way we fix it."

"And your merchants and people live on with-out a crash or a failure?" I asked in blank

"And your merchants and people live on whinout a crash or a failure?" I asked in blank surprise.

"I reckon so. I remember now that about a dozen of our citizens, merchants and others, have moved to Texas since the war, but we never asked any questions! I know that it surprised us to see property changing hands without any money passing, but it was a final settlement, you know."

"Colonel, you would have done better with the railroad, and some new settlers."

"D—n it, sir, no! We must preserve our society, and keep out the scrubs. Now, don't misunderstand me—I am not against progress—enlightened progress, but I am against new-fangled ideas. We have accepted the results of the war, but we are not going to have Nodville torn up—she belongs to the old south, and while northerners will always be welcome, if any d—d yankees come fooling around here with their finicky notions they will find us ready to give 'em another licking!"

Here our talk ended, and having finished my business I took my departure. But Nodville is not to be forgotten. It is the happy town where the colonels live—blessed be its memory!

PLUNKETT BY THE SEA.

THE OLD MAN VISITS SAVANNAH ON "MERCHANT'S WEEK."

Ocean From an Up-Countryma andpoint—From the Central's Warf to Tybee Island.-The Fishes.

"I seed wonders in Savannah last week," said Plunkett to Brown.

"I never believed before that the story erbout there being more water than there was land was true, but I believe it now, and the things to be seen upon the sea coast are won-derful—too wonderful for me to tell—for folks would say that I was er liar, and I'm trying hard now to get up a reputation for truth. I never did exactly believe that the world was round, but I believe it now, for I stood and seed the ships coming from away off and this is convincing, for you first see the tops of the great masts and rigging and as the ship crawls on up the hill, as it were, you see more and more till it all comes in view. Them great ships are wonderful, the ocean is wonderful. people of all nations who throng the wharf and live ermong the shipping are wonderful, and you will have to go there to believe.

"I stood at what they call the Central Rail-road company's wharf and seed more in ten minutes than I had seed in all my life put to-

"You have seed ants and watched 'em at their work. This 'shipping' reminded me of the ants. The boats are moving out and in, round and erbout, a stream of 'em is going out to get er load and er stream of 'em are coming in already loaded—just like ants. A little boat, that they call a tug, will come tugging in with a great ship hitched fast to it that is ten times the biggest-just like a little bit of an ant tugging at er big crumb of bread. I uster think that an ant was the strongest thing in the world, according to size, but they haint,

"I wish you could see these great ships being loaded and unloaded. One of 'em will hold more produce-corn, wheat, cotton, fruit, furniture-wares of all kinds-than the coun ties of Pike, Spaulding, Clayton and Meriwether all make in er whole year.

"I watched one of these great ships 'towed' in by one of these tugs, and it was er sight to see the training that was present everywhere and the discipline that kept order—there is more confusion in the unloading of er one horse wagon in this up-country than you would see in er whole day ermong these great ships.
"Just go out tomorrow and scatter some bread crumbs erround er big ant hole and then watch the ants store it away in their cells. Imagine the ants to be great, strapping men with iron trucks in their hands and you have the impression that these loaders and unloaders of vessels made upon my mind.

"As the big ship drew near the shore three hundred strong men with trucks filed down the Central wharf, halted erlong the edge and faced to the sea-every man standing with trucks in hand, like er regiment on dress pa-

"The little 'tug' wabbles up with its big load and swings the ship's side erlong the wharf-way. The work begins—no delay, no confusion-in er twinkling the trap doors of the ship are thrown open and the truck-men come to attention, left face and march in single-file, as it were, in at one end of the ship, get their load and out at the other end. Round and round the line moves, never stopping night and day, the work goes on and the ship's cargo is piled like little mountains upon the

"There is no use for me to tell you the ermount that one of these big ships will holdyou wouldn't believe it, nor would I if I hadn't have seed it. A pile as big as the new state capitol building was just a beginningwhen they got out that much it just made a little hole to give room to work-its wonder ful, wonderful!

"These ocean ships are wonders, and the folks upon them are wonderful. The sailors would dart erround ermong the rigging the same as er squirrel up er tree. When we uster raise the big liberty poles, before the war, there could scarcely ever be found er man to climb one of 'em, but these sailors dart up these great mast poles by rope ladders and swing and sway to and fro, and care no more for it than I would for taking er chew of to

"And the fish! We went to Tybee island and there they had what they called er fish-fry. Every fish from er whale to er minnow was upon the tables. They didn't have no whales, I'll take that back, but I saw fish from seven to ten feet long and as big as any feed-trough you ever put your eyes on.

"And the way them fish was caught and cooked! Think of er seine 200 yards long; so they were, and it was er sight to see the great wagon loads that they would catch at one haul. But the cooking. These up-country women don't know nothing erbout fixing up dishes outen fish. One of the cooks told the young fellow that was with methat the fishes at the 'fry' were served in ninety-three differ-ent ways-that is, cooked in ninety-three different styles, but I didn't eat no fish, I was erfeared it would make me thirsty, and I swore to the old 'oman before I left home that noter drop of any liquid should go down my throat till I got back, and I stuck to it, and that is why I drank so much water the night I did get home.

"I'm glad I went to Savannah, for I seed the world, but I'm satisfied now more than ever with these old hills. That level country is deceiving as to distances—more especially on the water. As we went down to Tybee I seed er place just er little ways off-I would er swore that I could have throwed er rock to it from where I was, and when I heard that it was the quarantine station where they held folks infected with disease I was scared I'd catch something, but the captain told me there was no danger—it was too far off. I told him it didn't look to me like mor'n the length of three or four plow lines to it, but, says he, you three or four plow lines to it, but, says he, you see them men in the rigging. I looked and couldn't see no men but I seed some little specks erbout like flyes and I told the captain I seed them specks, flies or mosquitoes, and he swore to me that what I called specks in ermong the rigging was full-grown sailors. I didn't dispute it, for there were many things just as wonderful to me.

"But I'm back home and I'm glad of it.

"But I'm back home and I'm glad of it. Great bodies of water don't have any charms for me. I like these old red hills best, and green truck from the garden with some corn bread suits me better than fish, but if you want to have er good time and meet clever people, go to Savannah on their next Mer-chant's Week,' but don't you drink er drap of nothing."

My son, twelve years of age, has been afflicted with scrofula for eight years. His hip joint protruded through the skin, and he could not walk except on crutches, and he was also nearly blind. I had him under the was also hearly blind. I had him under the care of the best doctors without avail, and had given him up to die, when I was urged to try Bull's Sarsaparilla. He has used eight bottles and already his eyesight is restored and his limb much better. His appetite is now good, he looks well and is quite cheerful. I think with a few more better he rill hear think with a few more better hear think with with a few more bottles he will be completely restored.—James Lee, Nashville, Tenn.

May 15, 16 and 17, 1890, AT BRISTOL,

Offer for Sale, at Austion,

Business and Residence Lots,

Bristol is situated on the State Line, between Virginia and Tennessee, at the junction of the Norfolk and Western, and East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroads; is the eastern terminus of the South Atlantic and Ohio railroad, extending from Bristol into the coal fields and connecting with Louisville and Nashville railroad, at Big Stone Gap, and is the western terminus of the Bristol, Eliz and No. Car railroad, now building into the rich ores of Doe Mountain and Roane's Creek in Johnson county, Tenn.

Bristol is not a "paper" city; it has a population of about 12,000, live, energetic people; is rapidly growing, and is destined to be one of the largest manufacturing cities of the south. It lies within three hours of inexhaustible coking and domestic coals, the richest iron ore in the United States, and immense bodies of Virgin timber, all of which reach Bristol via the S. A. and O. and Elizabethon roads.

Its advantages of transportation and nearness to markets, its elevation, (nearly 1,700 feet), delightful climate, and its SOLID BASIS IN MINERAL WEALTH and timber, present inducements for investments rarely met with. During the past year over $1,000,000 have been invested.

The Bristol Iron and Steel company (owned by Pennsylvania iron men) has commenced the construction, on the company's lands, of the largest furnace plant in the south.

KEELY COMPANY. | KEELY COMPANY.

May 11, 1890.

One great fact needs to be known about this store:

Measured by the relation between the volume of sales and the shopping population of this city and vicinage, it is twice over the greatest success in Retail Trading in the South.

We advertise the fact for business, not boastful reasons. But there is a winning trade argument in it that we want to emphasize.

WHAT MADE THE BUSINESS?

Merely the best service, the stanchest goods in the largest variety, the least prices, the skill to plan, the ability to execute, the capacity to produce, and the wit and wisdom to present.

That's the whole case. Those truths are our acknowledged premises, and despite the rattle and talk concerning bargains, you may come here in confidence that the prices are as low or lower, and the assortment as good as you can find anywhere, generally vastly better.

With such an organization at command miscellaneous shopping doesn't pay. Perhaps you have found it out.

Our Mr. O'DONELLY is now in New York examining with care and vigilance whatever the bargain jobbers have to offer. While scouring the metropolitan mart for merchandise he does not forget the great fundamental principles of the stare:

That of maintaining, without fail, the most perfect stocks of long-tried, universally accepted makes, and of grasping with zeal every virtuous facility that will assist us to procure them at little prices. That's the gist of our store-keeping theory.

It's a right serious matter with a great many people—buying a suit of Clothes. You naturally wish to know where you will get the best value for your money. Well, let metell you something: I don't advertise bargains; don't sell goods at manufacturer, prices: don't sell manufacturers' prices; don't sell goods at cost (except hard stock.) These things catch a few people, but the absurdity of all such claims carry their own reputation. What I wish to remark is this, that, according to sworn statement, I DO carry twice the stock of any clothing house in Atlanta. FARMERS, READ THIS,

AND SEE THE BENEFITS OF BUSI NESS CO-OPERATION.

President Searcy's Report of the Success of the Farmers' Co-operative Store of Griffin-Facts for Reflection.

GRIFFIN, Ga., May 10.-[Special.]-President W. E. H. Searcy has had a standing notice in the papers for some days for a meet ing of the stockholders of the Farmers' Cooperative company, to take place in Griffin Early this morning prominent planters were noticed on the streets, from various counties and sections. They were waiting for the meeting at the court-house at 1 o'clock.

THE MEETING CALLED TO ORDER. At that hour the meeting was called to order, with President Searcy in the chair. The following is his report and the other business of the meeting that can be made public:

Assets of the factory and machinery $42,000; bills receivable, $32,282.12; goods on hand, $6,109.25; real estate, in Georgia and Florida, not counted in plant $11,500; total property and assets, $96,141.37. The liabilities are, bills payable, $25,069.90; bonds, $15,000; total $40,069.90, leaving a clean margin over and above liabilities of $56,072.47, which shows that the Farmers' Co-operative Manufacturing company is about as solvent an institution as the country affords.

The part of the property represented by the bonds will not only pay the interest, but will also discharge the principal of the bonds, and leave a profit, as will readily appear from this calculation-$15,000 donds, 25 per cent, $3,500 interest. The company pays eight per cent, $1,200, one bond payable per year $1,000, $2,200; profit over and above retiring bonds,

THE BONDS REDEEM THEMSELVES. It is seen that the bonds will redeem themselves and leave eight per cent per annum to

That the mill will make twenty-five per cent and over is no longer a debatable question. The report went on to show the still greater profits that follow the erection of an acid chamber, and stated minutely the general condition of the company, closing with the statement "We have not accomplished our work without trials and tribulations; but we had friendly aid from our stockholders and the banks of Griffin, and have finally overcome all obstacles. If any dark clouds lowered they have all been dissipated, and we find arou us today not the storms we expected, but the gentle dews of God's providence." TO EXTEND THEIR BUSINESS.

The company resolved to build an acid chamber costing $15,000, and committees were appointed to begin at once taking subscriptions to that enterprise. The phos phate of the company's analysis is thirteen per cent higher than Charleston phosphate, which will enable the company to improve their guano without increasing the quantity of their acid. It is intended that every farmer in the counties around Spalding shall have stock in the company. There are already 500, and a will now be made to bring in 500 more. There is no doubt as to the erection of the acid chambers. The entire property of the company will be operated under the bank charter, which places behind the bank as valnable assets as a bank ever owned.

THE OBJECT OF THE BANK. object of the bank is to help stockholders in the spring and summer, when they need it, by small loans on their stock, and will enable them to use their money in the mill in the fall and winter, and then use it in the field in the spring and summer, the mill being safe and the stockholders making profits all around.

The directors, after the adjournment of the meeting, elected unanimously the following

W. E. H. Searcy, president. J. H. Walker, general manager. F. Stillwell, secretary. R. F. Johnson, applier and treasurer.

R. F. Johnson, sections and treasurer."
while there were a few changes in the directors elected, the old managers were unanimously re-elected. This is a deserved compliment to the heads of this great organization. Griffin feels proud to number such an enterprise as one of her institutions.

THE NEWS FROM JERSEY.

The Alliance Prospects-The Political Situa

JERSEY, Ga., May 10.—[Special.]—Jersey is located six miles west of Social Circle and in a good farming community. Two large stores are doing a large business. There is a good high school with Mr. T. C. Blasingame principal, in charge; two churches—Methodist and Baptist; one millinery store, blacksmith shop, public ginnery and a strong talk of an oil mill soon. ginnery and a strong talk of an oil mill soon. Some are dreaming of a railroad in the near future. A good large alliance organization meets here once a month (Jersey, No. 466), with Joseph L. Mobley, president. Nearly all take and read The Constitution. They say they cannot do without it since it is a good alliance paper. No political excitement is there as yet. Two of the best men in the county have been induced to make the race for the senate from this district, composed of Walton, Clark, Oconee, Newton and Rockdale counties, Colonel B. S. Walker and J. E. Nunnally, president of the Walton County Farmers' alliance, both good and true men. In the event of the election of either the district will be faithfully represented.

PHELAN IN COLUMBUS.

| Eight Cases Against Him in Connection
With the Exchanges.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 10.—[Special.]—On Friday night Mr. S. H. Phelan, of the cotton Friday night Mr. S. H. Phelan, of the cotton and produce exchanges recently suspended in Columbus, Atlanta, Macon and Americus, was brought from Atlanta by Bailiffs Owens and Crane, to answer certain charges against him in connection with the recent bucket-shop business in this city. He was comfortably quartered at the Rankin house, and was accompanied by several friends from Atlanta. Today he was arrested on eight charges: four for cheating and swindling, and four for doing business without registering with the ordinary, as the law requires. He satisfied all of these arrests by giving bonds aggregating $1,200. His friends signed the bonds for him, and his cases will come up for trial in the near future. The Sheriff of Wilcox.

The Sheriff of Wilcox.

ABBEVILLE, Ga., May 10.—[Special.]—Quite a stir was occasioned in the commissioner's court on Monday over the question as to whether Wilcox county had a sheriff. One of the sureties on the bond of the sheriff was relieved some time since and he was required to give a new bond, which he did, but it seems that there is doubt about the bond having been renewed in time. The ordinary, by his clerk, forwarded the bond to Atlanta, but says he has never heard anything from it. No election has been ordered.

Colonel D. G. Hughes and Colonel H. I. Morse went from Macon to Dublin in a buggy. They traveled a good deal of the way over the road bed of the Macon and Dublin road that was graded several years ago from Dublin to within ten miles of Macon. They found it in very excellent condition. Only here and there were a few washes? The entire road-bed can be put in first-class order for not more than two thousand dollars. It is to be regretted that this road has never been built. It would be a paying investment. There is some talk of trying to organize a construction company to build the road.

TO PROSECUTE HALL.

Hon. J. L. Hardeman Appointed to Do the Job in the United States Court.

MACON, Ga., March 10-[Special.]-Hon. J. L.

MACON, Ga., March 10—[Special.]—Hon. J. L. Hardeman, Macon's able lawyer and former solicitor general of this circuit, has been appointed by the attorney-general to prosecute L. A. Hall and Judge Goodwyn for perjury.

The appointment of Colonel Hardeman was occasioned by the developments in the celebrated Hall case tried before Judge Speer in this city a few weeks ago. United States District-Attorney Erwin, it will be remembered, defended Hall in a case of contempt, but during the case enough was developed to make a prosecution for perjury necessary, and thus District-Attorney Erwin is disqualified.

Money to Loan. Southern Home Pullding and Loan Association 1948, Broad Street, Cr muhlet. 18-11 ATLANTA IS ALL RIGHT

SHE HAS NO BOOM-JUST OUTGROW-ING HERSELF.

Talk With Mr. Forrest Adair, Who Tells Some Things Worth Knowing-No Fictitious Values, Atlanta has no fictitious boom.

In fact boom is not the word for the occasion, Atlanta is just outgrowing herself. There is plenty of room and we are going to

To satisfy yourself thoroughly on this question, if you are not already sound on the real estate question, you may read the evidence of the real estate man.

Mr. Forrest Adair was asked yesterday, what he thought of the real estate market and "Well," said he, "I believe there has been ore real estate sold during the four months of 1890, than in any one year since 1882.

""We have sold in our office over $850,000 worth of property since the 1st of January, and the demand today is better than it ever was before.'

was before."

"How do prices compare with the past, and what do you think of future enhancement?"

"Of course, nothing is sold except at a profit. I cannot recall any sales made here in several years at a loss, and as to future enhancement, no one who will ride around Atlanta and note the many new buildings and improvements, can doubt that property is now cheaper than it will ever be again, and right here I want to say that when you give accounts of sales now being made as so much more than a few years ago, you should go further and give the reasons for such advances.

"For instance a few years ago the Baker estate on South Pryor street, opposite the new Kiser building, was divided into seven lots and sold at auction for $30,000. The lots were each 26x185. One of these lots brought at the sale, I think, $4,500. It was sold six months ago, for $8,000, and today for $16,000. At that rate the whole property would now bring $112,000.

"But look at the cause of the advance. The "But look at the cause of the advance. The Metropolitan street car system centers in front of it. The new capitol has been built near it, the chamber of commerce, the new Kişer building and many other improvements have been made around it.
"At the time it sold for $30,000, Frank Redd rented the whole for $50 per month. It now rents, with old buildings on it, for $350 per month.

"Central property in Atlanta can be bought today as cheap per front foot as in any city of its size in the United States, and there are now no vacant stores in the city. I could rent twenty first-class central retail stores in the next thirty days If I had them vacant.

"There is a 50×100 lot on South Pryor street that I tried to sell last year for $25,000. On Thursday one of the owners asked me what it was worth. I told him I thought I could sell it for $40,000. He said he thought that too high and was willing to sell for $30,000. An hour afterwards I heard he had sold for $32,000 and on the same day the purchaser resold hour afterwards I heard he had sold for $32,000 and on the same day the purchaser resold for $42,000. That property now rents for $2,800 per annum on old leases and would now bring more.

"Three years ago we sold nine acres near the Elsas & May factory for $3,000. The owner has subdivided it and sold off some of it for $7,000, and has $12,000 worth left.

has such factory for $5,000. The owner has subdivided it and sold off some of it for $7,000, and has $12,000 worth left.

"Now, that sounds big, but since the first sale the Fair street dummy has been built by it and Elsas & May's factory doubled in capacity, Inman park conceived and completed, the electric line near it, new piano factory and many other improvements made that tend to enhance property.

"We have no lictitious boom, and every sale made so far is on a solid basis. Nobody can get hurt as long as we have something at our back and keep growing.

"You can't buy the Seltzer property today at an advance of ten per cent, and the owners are more than pleased with their investments. Building on that lot would pay handsomely on the investment."

Business in Brooks Court,

QUITMAN, Ga., May 10.—[Special.]—After a weeks' session, Brooks superior court adjourned today. In the J. C. The jury gave William Watson, colored, a verdict of one thousand; six hundred and fifty dollars against the Savanuah. Florida and verdict of one thousand; six hundred and fifty dollars against the Savannah, Florida and Western railroad for cutting off his foot. The road will move for a new trial. A DISGRACEFUL SCENE.

A Beautiful and Handsome Woman Ass Her Rights and Wrongs on a Public Thoroughfare in this City.

Thoroughfare in this city.

Late last evening as the crowds of people were wending their way on Whitehall, their attention was attracted to a lady and gentleman at the corner of Alabama, who were evidently quarreling, from the harsh language and epithets applied to each other aided by gestures with a parasol and cane as assistants. The lady was young and handsome and the gentleman young and ugly; both dressed in the latest fashionable style, to all appearances respectable and well to-do.

There was a crowd soon gathered and stopped to satisfy their morbid curiosity. The couple were quarreling and no one knew for what, the woman holding her antagonist down so that he was afraid towards the last to speak above a low tone. The woman was mad as a hornet. The lie passed several times. Some new-fangled high-toned profane language was used; such as, "Youkknow you have never been the husband you promised to be, you confounded, good-for-nothing, next-to-nobody, insignificant, unsophisticated elephant, jealous lion, hypocrite," and a lot more of hard names that were beyond the comprehension of the many spectators. The woman talked rapidly, and if ever a man received a tongue-lashing that was so bitter and deserving, as we learned afterward, we are not aware of it.

ing, as we learned afterward, we are not aware of it.

There was no policeman on hand to make arrests or serve copies of charges, so your reporter made bold enough to ask the lady what arrests or serve copies of charges, so your reporter made bold enough to ask the lady what was the cause of her wrath upon her better half, and she replied that she had no use for reporters, and The Constitution had better be giving their attention to other matters than prying into family affairs. We thanked her for the compliment. The man looked too badly crestfallen for us to say anything to him, so we awaited further developments, and shortly after they walked off towards Marietta street across the railroad. They stopped at Burman's corner, and the woman said she would sue for a divorce and alimony if he still refused to provide for necessities. As usual, she had the last word, and said she would have it or die. They then continued their journey, with two dozen or more men and boys behind them, who were eager to get the outcome of the matter. Everybody had his opinion until the couple who caused so much excitement, stopped at Manning Furniture company, No. 5 North Broad street, and the lady was so startled and shocked at the low prices of fly-screens that she fainted, and her husband ordered fly-screens for his whole house.

On Tuesday evening, May 6th, at the studio of Short-hand and type-writing, on Hunter street, Mr A. C. Briscoe tendered to the pupils and ex-pupils of his school a delightful reception, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. Briscoe and his assist ant. Mr. Arnold, were aided in receiving the guests by Miss Alice Tuller, the efficient principal of the type-writing department of this institution. As most valid proof of the past and present popularity of this school, it need only be said that the invitation list reached 200. A goodly number of these were present. The ex-pupils gave practical illustration of the thorough and these were present. The ex-papils gave practical illustration of the thorough and efficient instruction they had received at this school, for each was congratulating him, or herself on the good fortune that had marked their career as business men and women, and were more than willing to accord the credit of it to their instructors, and deemed themselves fortunate in that they had studied under those who have the rare gift of imparting to others their thorough knowledge of these accom-

The evening was pleasingly interpersed with rocal and instrumental music, and one or two recitations, among which was an off-hand, long-hand poem on "Short-Hand," by one of the pu-pils. Delicious refreshments were served.

The past of this school is a fair promise for its future. Mr. Briscoe and his able assistants are to be congratulated upon having attained a degree of excellence in this branch of education which none in the south can, or will ever, excel.

TO MEET THE BOYS AND GIRLS

Who Are Raising the Quarters With Which to Bring Him from His Native Fields in Far-Off

It grows, it grows!

And the children's friend, the Elephant, draws nearer to Atlanta. All over the city the children are hard at work. Some of the lists came in yesterday, but many of the little workers are holding off until they have seen all their friends and have raised at least ten dollars. Here are some of yesterday's notable additions to the fund:

Mr. G. T. G. White, the great insurance man, sent his check for FIFTY DOLLARS. Howell Woodward sent in EIGHTEEN DOL-LARS, all of it collected by him between 11 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the Little Miss Lizzie Gray, of Meridian, Miss.

sent in $13.32 which she collected from Atlanta friends. Walter H. Rich sent in $10.10.

Jacob Roy Haas sent in $10.25. Little Miss Louise Wurm sent $10.45. Oscar Weinmeister, who sent $7 a few days ago, added $6.25 to that sum yesterday. Then there were many who sent smaller

Mr. White's Letter. The letter of Mr. G. T. G. White, who enclosed a check on his New York bank for $50, proves that he is not only a great admirer of Atlanta but is a great friend of the children as well. Here is the letter he sends to THE CON-STITUTION: ATLANTA, Ga., May 10th, 1890.—Editors Consti-tution: While riding this morning from Chatta-

MAJOR G. T. G. WHITE. nooga to Atlanta, I purchased a copy of THE AT-LANTA CONSTITUTION, In fact, I make it a rule always to buy this paper wherever I can find one, for I am very much in terested in this journal, not only on account of its associations with my dear friend, the late Henry W. Grady, but because it is doing so much good for Atlanta, as well as the country at large. But what particularly attracted my attention this morning in reading the paper, was the editorial in relation to the contribution fund for the purchasing of an elephant to be placed in Grant park, as a source of amusement and instruction to the younger generation and an attraction to the older people.

Now, my dear friend, while I have a fondness for all animals, I must confess that I have a great veneration for an elephant.
I have, in the course of my life, had one or two "white elephants," and, in fact, I have several now on hand which I would like to dispose of, but unfortunately the market is supplied, and I shall have to hold on to them until there is a demand. But for all that, I never owned just such an elephant as you are desirous of securing, and I have made up my mind, as far as I am concerned, that Atlanta shall have an elephant, and the dear little children shall have an opportunity of enjoying its beauty and nobleness of character to the fullest

Now, there must be numbers of little foks in Atlanta who are unable to subscribe twenty-five cents to this fund and who doubtless will want to enjoy the society of the elephant, and further curing it, they may ree!, as they had no hand in se-curing it, they ought not to avail themselves of the privilege of seeing it, and in order to make a pro-vision for them, I enclose you my check on New York for fifty dollars which you can consider as a donation from 200 children at twenty-five cents each, who are unable to contribute out of their

In conclusion, let me remark that I am one of those men "whose youth has out-lasted his boyhood and with whom old feelings and sympathies still linger." Yours very truly,

GEORGE T. G. WHITE.

Naming the Elephant. We are going to have an elephant. THE Constitution says so, and so do the people. This makes it an assured fact. Now for a suggestion about naming it. I propose the name of every child who send the paper a list of $10 or over be placed in a box and a name be be drawn from them—whose name is drawn to be given the elephant. This will encourage all the little ones, and can't fail to give satisfac-

THE GOOD TEMPLARS. An Interesting Meeting to be Held Tomor

The regular monthly public meeting of Georgia lodge No. 1, I. O. G. T., which was postponed from last Monday night on account of the inclement weather, will take place toorrow night at the Good Templars hall, No. 95 East Alabama street, at 8 o'clock. The programme which has been arranged will be entertaining, and an evening spent at the meetings will never be regretted.

This being the first meeting after the temperance convention, which has just met and adjourned, an elegant meeting may be expected. The order is one of the most flourishing organizations in the world, and today numbers over 600,000 members. This ordestakes the broadest ground upon all questions connected with the temperance reform.

No other feature in the order so commended itself to favor as its social advantages.

The Good Templars make the improvement of social qualities a part of their work, and they think it is here that much of their power and strength lies—to educate the youth in the principles of total abstinence. To this end, and that this taste in all youth for sociability and social gatherings all youth for sociability and social gatherings may be legitimately gratified, they are given the lodge-room, filled with whole families and both sexes, and throw around it every attraction in their power; try to render it so attractive that no one will wish to spend his evenings in a bar or club-room, saloon, or any place that panders to the passions of men.

All persons of good moral character desiring the prohibition of the liquor traffic can, and are earnestly invited to, join Georgia Lodge in its crusade against the saloon. Everyone is therefore invited to be present tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, at their public meeting, whether they unite under the banner of Faith, Hope and Charity, or not.

GUILLAUME'S PORTRAIT OF MR. GRADY To Be Accepted by the Chamber of Com-merce Tuesday.

The portrait of Mr. Grady, painted by the artist Guillaume, will be presented to the chamber of commerce next Tuesday.

The members of that body are requested to meet promptly at 11 a. m. The public generally is invited to be present.

After this the picture will be presented by the committee of the chamber having charge of the matter. The committee is Mr. Julius R. Brown, Mr. R. D. Spalding, Judge D. A. Tompkins, Mr. E. P. Chamberlin and Colonel G. W. Adair.

Mr. Brown will make the presentation address on the part of the committee.

It will be accepted on behalf of the chamber of commerce by Captain E. P. Howell.

Other short talks will be made.

The work, which has been on exhibition in Chamberlin & Johnson's window, is pronounced the finest seen here in years, and is an excellent portrait.

THE THEATER THIS WEEK.

We will have another week of popular price performances, beginning Monday evening with Tillotson's military romantic drama, "Lynwood." Tillotson's military romantic drama, "Lynwood." The company who will appear is certainly the best of the kind, and has two stars, J. H. Huntley and Miss Rosa McAllister, supported by an excellent troupe and a splendid military band and orchestra. Everywhere around us this company has received the best notices for the fire performances and the good plays presented, and we have no doubt that the theater-goers of Atlanta will also be pleased. There will be a change of bill every night. The prices will rank from fifty to fifteen cents, and every one anxious to see a good play can afford to go at such prices.

The Fort Worth Gazette said of the appearance of the company in that city:

"It is seldom our people have an opportunity to see a first-class company in a first-class comedy, and had the merits of the performance been sufficiently known the opera-house would not have held the people. It is very seldom that a company collectively and individually meritorious visits our city. Each and every member bears a reputation in their profession of the highest quality.

"Their positions being recognized for years, brought together in such a comedy as "Van, the Virginian," where their abilities are particularly suited to the requirements of the play, nothing but a delightful result could be looked for; and it came, for a better comedy performance has never been given in Fort Worth. The intelligence and delicacy in the handling of each part, the subtle and artistic merits of each member, bring into notice the fine construction of the comedy. It is not necessary to particularize each member, so one can only class them as a whole—a mosaic of comedians."

THE RUSE WORKED

GEN. LEE'S MONUMENT

ATLANTA GENTLEMEN WHO WILL VISIT RICHMOND.

Imposing Ceremonies Will Be Held at the Unveiling-A Great Gathering of Confederate Veterans.

A large party of Atlanta veterans will soon be organized to visit Richmond, Va., on the 20th of May and take part in the ceremonies of unveiling the Lee monument. preparations are being made by the military committee of Richmond to look after the vis-iting companies, and everything possible will be done to secure their comfort.

Among those who will form the Atlanta delegation are Governor John B. Gordon, Colonel Carter, Captain Frank Myers, Captain George Forbes and Messrs. A. S. King, S. H. Landrum, W. H. Clayton and W. P. Mitchell. A number of others will go who have not yet made formal application to be included in the party.

An effort is being made to have gray uniforms made in time for the occasion, and with slouch hats and confederate veteran badges the Atlanta delegation will look, as far as costume goes, very much as they did a quarter of a century back.

The committee in charge of the unveiling ceremonies has sent to all military companies an additional circular, which gives full particulars relating to transportation, quarters and other matters of general interest. The circular states that all Virginia railroads were granted a rate of one cent a mile for uniformed or organized veteran bodies of not less than twenty-nine men traveling on one ticket. In the other southern states the rates are about the same, but an agreement will have to be made by commanding officers with the local station agents, who have been instructed in the matter.

The exposition building of 1888 in Richmond has been secured for the quarters of the visi-tors. Its immense size, with the washing conveniences, will make it as comfortable as any place which could be secured:

The committee in their circular specially request that each man bring with him a bed sack of some cheap material which could be filled with straw at the quarters.

Any command desiring to go into camp can send its tents on in advance, and they will be pitched in the grounds and near the other It is also the intention of the committee to provide for all uniformed troops who report to it, and who are quartered in the way provided for them, two well-cooked meals on each of the three days the ceremonies continue. There will also be a lunch-room, where cot fee and sandwiches will be served at all hours.

Commanders are earnestly requested to notice fy the chairman of the military committee of their arrival and of any other details which affect their comfort. The invitations sent out by the Lee monument association are a work of art. On the outside cover, surrounded by delicate scroll work, is a tinted picture of the equestrian statue of General Lee, which will be unveiled: on the reverse side are two confederate flags divided by a confederate veteran's badge. Inside is a beautifully printed invitation signed by P. W. McKinney, president of the Lee monu-ment association and chairman of committee

Horticultural society, at the department of agriculture yesterday morning, was an interesting and successful one.

President Beatie handled the gravel with accustemed grace and dignity. Mrs. Cephas M. Brown was elected a member. The exhibits were especially fine in quality. President Beatie exhibited twenty-five varieties of roses, and several of flowering shrubs; Mrs. A. W. Underwood, the popular vice-president, brought in a splandid collection of pansies; Mrs. Rosa A. Hanbury's collection of damask roses were admired; Mrs. R. H. Huzza exhibited twelve varities of roses; and Mrs. Green a handsome collection of pansies.

Mr. James Barpitt, the florist, presented a basket full of geraniums and petunias that elicited general commendation. One new geranium he asked the society to name, and by general consent it will be named Mrs. Underwood.

Dr. Samuel Hape discussed strawberries. Professor Newman, of Auburn, Ala., truits; Mr. James Burpitt petunias and geraniums, and President Beatile, roses.

The battery is the astonishing feature of the team. It is made up of Snyder and Marshall. Snyder has a very swift delivery with the curves, and never gets rattled. He studies the game care-fully and watches the bases successfully.

Out at McPherson's barracks there is a good team. It is composed of United States soldiers, and they play well, too. The men have made a study of baseball, and the club which beats them must loose no chance.

The Atlantas and the McPhersons have played two games at Grant park, and both games have been witnessed by enthusiastic crowds. The two teams are now arranging a summer schedule of two games each week, one to be played at the military post, the other at Grant park.

The racing season is now fully on and the two turf exchanges are entertaining large crowds every evening. At Linden, N. J., and Lexington, Ky., the racing is fine and Atlanta money changes bands every day.

He does not consider it a certainty by any means that Chicago will win the Players' league pennant, as New York, Boston and Buffalo are in the fight. The latter, he thinks, is one of the strongest batting clubs in the country, and it will give all the other teams a hard fight.

Gus Schmelz, Atlanta's old manager, is now handling the Cleveland league, and says his club is the easiest to manage he has ever had.

In the league the games are maving along nicely and the attendance is increasing. Chicago is in and the respective is increasing. Chicago is in the lead with Brooklyn a good second. Anson's colts are doing some remarkable work and promise to surpass any team he has yet gathered around him. New York, the pennant flyers of last reason, are at the tail-end. But New York has mighty few of the giants on its pay roll.

In the Brotherhood league the New Yorks-the to crippled pitchers. The Brotherhood is not moving along as nicely as the League. In Philadelphia there has been some trouble, but it does not amount to much. The Bostons lead in the pennant fight, closely followed by the great Chicago aggregation. Buffalo has not held the pace at which she started out, and has dropped to third place, closely pressed by Ward's team, which is surprising everybody. Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Cleveland seem to be of about the same speed, and are closely bunched in the second division. Of course last place will not be long New York's position. Louisville in the association has at last secured a good team, and is now a tie with Rochester for first place. Both clubs have played good ball and are fairly entitled to their temporary eminence. The Athletic club is third and St. Louis fourth, within easy reach of the leaders. Both of these clubs are evidently in the fight for the pennant. The Columbus club is not doing the work expected of it, but this is due to the crippled condition of the team. Syracuse, Brooklyn and Toledo bring up the rear, and these three seem to be the weaklings. Toledo is much stronger than her position at the tail-end would indicate, and will easily get a better place.

SKINNER'S SLAYER

From the Brooklyn Citizen.

Max Maretzek tells the story of the stage career of Eliza Henzler, who became the wife of the king of Portugal. She was the daughter of a poor Boston tailor, who attracted the attention of an opera manager by her fine voice and well-shaped figure and large, brown eyes. When she became noted as an opera singer DomFernando, the consort of Queen Maria della Gloria, of Portugal, took her under his protection. Soon after the death of his queen he created our Boston girl countess of Edia, and after paying due respect to the queen's memory married the countess, otherwise Eliza Henzler. Her husband being originally a prince of the house of Coburg, the Boston tailor's daughter became sister-in-law to Queen Victoria, aunt of the Prince of Wales and the present king of the Belgians, and mother-in-law of the reigning king of Portugal. The mysterious murder of Skinner, the stranger in the Folsom European hotel, last Saturday a week ago, is about to be cleared up. Skinner's slayer is known, and his discovery is due to the detective work of THE Con-STITUTION city force. Several days ago a member of the staff was several days and a member of the case and upon it he be-gan working industriously. His work promised a solution of the mystery and on Thursday the information acquired was given and mother-in-law of the long stages.

When Queen Isabella, of Spain, was sent into exile Bismarck tried to put a Hohenzol-lern on the Spanish throne. Louis Napoleon opposed it, with an eye to a Bonaparte for the position. At the same time a strong coalition of the grandees of Spain favored placing Dom Fernando, of Portugal, on their country's throne, with all the chances in his favor. But while the grandees were content to have Dom Chief Connolly.

The chief held a consultation at once with Captain Wright and Detectives Cason and Bedford.

The detectives were working the same clew.

But the information given them by the chief cleared away much that they had not Friday night the work of the officers reached point where they found several arrests necssary.

The other three parties arrested were women living on Collins street.

From all of these comes statements touching the killing of Skinner, and the statements are nearly all alike.

And they are similar to the one given chief onnoily by THE CONSTITUTION.

It appears that Skinner, who was known as Jim Howard, a man by the name of Hines, who as Goldman, did the killing, Henry Sifley and Denny, the man who came up from Ma-con to tell Chief Connally that he knew nothing of the shooting, have been friends for R. S. Bramlett, 5 Wheat street, Y. M. C. A. building. Pure Ice a long time.

This man Denny and Goldman, or Hines may yet prove to be one and the same man. Skinner and Goldman came to Atlanta few days before the killing and passed their evenings on Collins street with the demimonde. On Friday evening before the killing they were on that street, and in one of the houses Skinner and Goldman had a fight.

It was in that fight that Skinner received the knife wound which he tried so hard to conceal just before he died. The women in the house, however, assert there was no fight.

Early Saturday morning Sifley and Goldman left the house quite early, Sifley saying:

The two men left the house, and somewhere the attest west Skinner.

Sifley went with Goldman down the Georgia railroad and out to Ponce de Leon. Then he came back, got a dollar's worth of cigarettes and carried them out to Goldman.

The next day Goldman sent to Sifley for a

When Sifley was taken before the grand jury he swore that he did not see Goldman after the shooting.

He new admits that he did see him.

Denny has been identified by two witnesses as Goldman, whom the women knew as Hines or Louis.

is a corner in silver.

It is understood there are four million ounces of silver in the corner, which has been manipulated for New York bankers and Washington politicians.

During the past three days the treasury department has purchased at one time 100,000 ounces of silver, consisting of English bullion and Mexican dollars. No American bullion can be had, except at a marked advance over the market prices, and none has been offered at the treasury department except at an adnce of several points. An evidence of the fact that there is a corner in silver is, that Indian silver has gone up in the London market, in the last two days, nearly two pence an ounce, and from forty-five and one-fourth to forty-seven pence. It is the popular belief here that a free-coinage silver bill will soon be passed. The silver men among the republican senators, it is said, have formed a combination with the democratic senators. whereby a free-coinage bill will be rushed ough the senate within a week. The republican silver senators have agreed, it is said, to vote against a federal election law if the democratic serators would vote with them for free coinage. As the majority of democrats want free coinage, this was an easy proposition for them to accept. On Monday Senator Jones, of Nevada, is expected to attack his own silver bill, and urge the passage of a free-

A Provision to That Effect Inserted in the Army Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The army appropriation bill was taken up by the senate, the pecding questions being Mr. Hale's amendment, providing that no alcoholic liquor, beer or wine, shall be sold and supplied to enlisted men in any canteen or building in garrison or military posts, and Mr. Cockrell's amendment to it, striking out the words "beer or wine."

The latter amendment was disagreed to—yeas 16, nays 29, a party vote, except that Mr. Sherman voted "aye" with the democrats.

DISCUSSING M'KINLEY'S BILL. Several Speeches Made Against the Tariff

WASHINGTON, May 10.-After the reading of the journal the house went into committee of the whole, Mr. Grosvenor in the chair, for the further consideration of the tariff bill.

Mr. Lanham, of Texas, especially antago nized the feature of the bill which places duty on silver-lead ore, declaring that it would have the effect of destroying the smelting in-dustry of Texas and neighboring states, and it would invite retaliation. Mr. McAdoo, of Nev York, declared that what the majority contended for was not the American protective system. Were Henry Clay, sometimes alluded to as the founder of the protective system, and Silas Wright, members of this house, they would be found in unqualified opposition to this bill.

If the United States made its duties prohibitory, it must expect retaliation against its corn and wheat and beef on the part of the nations of Europe. If he were the most radical but far-seeing protectionist, he would vote against the measure, because he believed that in the end any such abuse of the taxing power must lead to the total destruction of what had been called the American system. The pending bill was a step backward in curlization and an attempt to outwit the laws of nature and to evade the rules of common honesty.

Mr. LaFollette, of Wisconsin (member of the committee on ways and means), drew a comparison between the Mill's bill and the pending measure and the measures faced in opposite directions. An ocean could roll between them, and if each bill were consigned to the home of a majority of its friends, an ocean would roll between them. [Applause.]

The republican bill favored protection to American agriculture, manufactories and labor; the democratic bill opposed that policy. The republican bill proposed to save the home market for Americans; the democratic bill proposed to invite all other countries to take this market from our people whenever it was in their power to do so. The issue was made up, and he, as a republican, welcomed it. On these lines the contest must be fought out to the end. The democrats were for the repeal of the protective duty; the republicans were for its continuance.

SPRINGER'S ARGUMENT AGAINST THE BILL.

SPRINGER'S ARGUMENT AGAINST THE BILL. Mr. Springer (taking the place of Mr. Car-lisle) controverted the declaration made by Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, that it was a theory and not a condition that confronts us. He contended that the country was confronted contended that the country was confronted with a condition in respect to the treasury. The theory of the majority was not wholly new, but it had never been so openly avowed as it was in the pending bill. The system of protection was a system to favor classes. If he were employed as an attorney to cover special privileges on particular individuals and interests for past fa. ars, he could not have improved on the pending bill. He did not assert that at the last election there had been any agreement between the manufacturers of the country and the chairmans of the national republican committee that certain contributions were to be made to the republican cam paign fund, in return for which these manufacturers were to be given an additional protective tariff. He hid not assert this; but if it were a fact—if it were literally true—the framers of the pending bill could not have responded to the agreement with more perfect success than they had done. He denounced the two bounty features of the bill (sugar and silk), and contended that there was no power in congress to appropriate money raised from the people by taxation and give it to any particular industry of the country to encourage its business.

In a facetious manner he proceeded to point out the benefit which would inure to the farmers of Illinois from the provisions of the law. Cabbages now were taxed ten per cent advalorem. It was now proposed to tax them three per cent a head. According to the agricultural reports, no cabbages were imported at ten per cent. How many would be imported at an equivalent of fifty per cent? [Laughter.] This was for the benefit of the Illinois farmer. [Laughter.]

This was for the benefit of the Illinois farmer. [Laughter.]
Mr. Dingley asserted that cabbage was imported, but that it appeared in the statistics as "vegetables."
Mr. Springer said the democratic party was ready to meet the issue tendered in the bill, and he predicted that the house in the fifty-second congress would have a democratic majority of fifty. In 1892 there would be a democratic congress, pladged to repeal this bill. if second congress would have a democratic majority of fifty. In 1892 there would be a democratic congress, pledged to repeal this bill, if it should become a law.

Mr. Dingley, of Maine, after discussing, in an exhaustive detail, the provisions of the bill, the generalized methods upon which the measure had been framed. The fact that under protection the United States had become the largest manufacturing nation in the world was a refutation of the statement that protection was a failure. The pending bill was framed upon the theory that articles which the United States could not produce, or produce in sufficient quantities to supply the home demand, should be placed upon the free list, because the duty on such articles appreciated the cost to the consumer; and that was why the duty on sugar, of which the United States produced only one-eighth of its consumption, was a tax which increased the burdens of the people.

MR. BARNES PLEADS FOR THE FARD ERS.

Mr. Barnes, of Georgia, addressed the com-

Mr. Barnes, of Georgia, addressed the com-mittee in opposition to the protective system of the bill. He urged that before the war no one contended for protection except as an incident to revenue; that the present high tariff system was a mere measure, but had been con-tinued during a period of twenty-five years of peace to the enrichment of a few, and the impoverishment of the great body of the people, and that under its operations wealth was being concentrated in the hands of the privileged class. This country, and especially the farmers of the country, were crying out for relief and more markets. The reply of the republican party was a still further increase of duties, and an increase of the restriction on trade. The only hope of the country was in a reduction of taxation on the necessaries of life, the imposition of an income tax for pensions, and an increase of currency to an extent necessary for business

Mr. Cummings, of New York, characterized the present session of congress as a raging sea of ravenous legislation. The house had rules which were a complex battery turned upon the treasury. The friends of the people were permitted only to cry out before they were thrown overboard and breathed their moans to the winds and waves. This tailff bill was the only measure in the complex machinery. 'Thank God," said Ebenezer Elliot, pointing to the top of a bleak mountain in Scotland, "There is one place on earth where taxed wheat and paupers cannot grow." [Applause.]
Revenue protection was a sneak thief in the sarder of the people. As the war tariff had toourged the people with a whip (carrying out the Biblical story of Jeroboam), its offspring loday threatened them with scorpions. The republicans claimed that the bill was carrying out the American system. It was the did cast-off and abandoned system of England. It was the spectre of the most lawless and meansath with his goggle eye and elongated tongue. to the top of a bleak mountain in Scotland with his goggle eye and elongated tongue, ought to be here to advocate this bill. agance was the necessity now. This bill struck at New York as though she were a viper or an unclean reptile. On behalf of her millions of people he protested against the passage of this bill. [Applause.]

Condition of the Crops.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Statistical returns of the department of agriculture for May relative to washingtons, has in ...—statutar fetims of the department of agriculture for May relative to cotton report, the progress of planting and conditions affecting seeding and germination. Planting is late except in the Carolinas. In Georgia, it is scarcely up to the average at this date, the delay being caused by drouth, difficulty of plowing and slow germination. From Alabama westward serions delays have occurred from excessive rains, which flowed over bottom lands and floods from the rise of great rivers. Replanting is necessary where seed has rotted in the ground. A great scarcity of seed is reported in parts of Tennessee. Usually nearly seven-eights of the cotton is sowed before the close of April. This year only three-fourths had been planted. Proportions in southern states are reported as follows: Virginia, 55 per cent. North Carolina, 76; Arkansas, 60; Tennessee, 57. Average 75.8 per cent. In Mississippi river botton lands the floods, as well as actual overflow, prevent planting, which will be actively pushed as the waters subside and the danger becomes less imminent.

The Emperor and the Workingmen—His Latest Scheme to Adjust Difficulties— A Question of Tongues. BERLIN, May 10 .- [Copyright 1890 by New York Associated Press.]—The reichstag, beginning the active labors of the session on Monday, with the debate on the East Africa credit, has only six weeks' work before proragation which has been fixed for June 20th. Consideration of the military bill will precede the measures for benefitting the workingmen. Not much will be heard of the last mentioned measures before the adjournment. Since the labor pro-tection bill was issued Wednesday, scrutiny reveals a number of riders to the main pro-posals, tending to make illusory some of the best provisions of the measure by giving employers the means of escaping them.

Thus, under special circumstances, employers can be authorized to break the rule limiting the work of children under thirteen years to six hours, and of youths under sixteen to ten hours. The bill mentions spin-ning factories and other occupations where ex-ceptions may be granted, of which employes may readily avail themselves. Another clause transfers direct responsibility of a breach of the laws from employers to managers or foremen, thus opening the way for evasions, and making men of straw answerable instead of the principals. The proposals relating to a breach of contracts are held by the Freisinnige party and socialits to be disguised attacks upon the right of a coalition leading to further the pow-ers for the suppression of strikes. The oppo-sition gathnrs force, the socialists declaring that the supposed new era of labor reforms differs little from the Bismarckian era, and that the bill will be a deception unless much modified. This spirit of opposition promises a sequence of irritative debates before the house can dispose of the labor bill.

A LABOR BUREAU.

Another labor conference, having influence in molding the final form of the bill, will be held here. The emperor intends to summon delegates from every trade in Germany to discuss trade questions, and he proposes to establish a special permanent operatives' council, under the presidency of Baron Von Berlapsch, under the presidency of Baron Von Berlapsch, minister of commerce, each member having 2,000 marks yearly, with the title of arbeitsrath. Members of the council will be selected from delegates to the conference. The project is obviously in the same line as the labor schemes aiming to give imperial control of the workingmen, with purchase power over salaried leaders. Socialists, like Vollmar, Liebnecht and Bebel, who are impregnable to money considerations, will resent the emperor'soffer. peror's offer.

The military bill will be first to lead to some

The military bill will be first to lead to some definition of the party groups. The socialist section, the freissinnige section and the center section are expected to oppose the bill. Still, the government will have a large majority. The freissinnige party continues to be weakened, through internal dissensions, largely of a personal character. Rickart, Barth and Chroder are still aiming to get rid of Richter's leadership. Prince Schonach Karolath, whose humanitarian oration at the last session attracted so much attention, has seceded from the reichsparti and gone over to the national liberals. He has just become grand master of the Grand Orient of Prussia. He will infuse a stronger spirit of liberalism among the national liberals.

THE AFRICAN QUESTION.

Mr. White's book on East Africa was issued

Mr. White's book on East Africa was issued today, preparatory to Monday's debate. It gives a dispatch from Major Wissman, stating that Emin Pasha strongly desired to place his experience at the disposal of the German service, and begged that his offer might be placed vice, and begged that his offer might be placed before the emperor and Prince Bismarck. Prince Bismarck replies: "Emin's offer is welcome. Inform me exactly of his wishes." Major Wissmann, thereupon, arranged the existing engagement with Emin, who, from his first contract with Major Wissmann, had been eager to escape from English influences.

Chancellor von Caprivi is expected to inform Chancellor von Caprivi is expected to inform the house as to the position of negotiations with England on the delimitation of the boundaries in Africa. The English envoy, Sir Percy Anderson, declines to admit the German claims extending her frontier and influence to the Congo free state. He claims that English influence extends from the Victoria Nyanza to the Albert Nyanza, including the whole basin of the White Nile. It is obviously the aim of the Salisbury government to ly the aim of the Salisbury government to grasp the territorial line from South Africa to the Soudan.

BISMARCK BELIEVES HE WILL BE RECALLED. Prince Bismarck, during the week, received several communications from the emperor couched in friendly terms, but practically suggesting that his retirement from office should nvolve political inactivity. Bucher and Poschenger stayed two days at Friedrichuhe, and left impressed with the conviction that the exchancellor considered himself still the mopotent influence in the empire, believing that the emperor ere long will be obliged to recall him to extricate the government from the difficulties into which he will have plunged it. He freely expressed his discontent because the emperor in his speech from the throne emperor in his speech from the throne omitted reference to his dismissal. The emperor denies that "dismissal" is the right phrase. If the prince had not several times offered to resign, the emperor would not have taken advantage of the last threat to part with him. The threat was first made verbally and was not accepted, then a request for permission to resign was made in writing and was granted. The Freisinnige Zeitung is gaining bad notoriety through its publication of scandals in regard to Prince Bismarck. It declares that a medical specialist knows that the ex-chancellor is suffering from alcoholism, and not the morphine habit. Bismarck's friends do not heed the attacks, and even his enemies are heed the attacks, and even his enemies are disgusted by them. The emperor will go to Silesia tomorrow to shoot on the estates of Count Hochberg.

HE DOESN'T SPEAK GOOD GERWAY. A queer issue has arisen with the czar over the meeting with Emperor William, at the coming manaouvers at Krasnoesclo. Last year, at the imperial meeting, their majesties spoke French. Emperor William recently instructed General von Schweinitz, German minister to Russia, to ask the czar to use the German language. Schweinitz preferred the request to M. D. Giers, Russia's prime minister, in the Russian language, promising that at the next visit of the czar to formising that at the next visit of the czar to Germany, Emperor William would speak the Russian language and would cause everybody around the czar to use the same tongue. M. Giers pleads that the czar don't speak good German, and says that if Emperor William ignores French, he must have recourso to Russian.

The story that Prince Henry, the emperor's brother, was in disgrace and had been given a month's forced leave of absence is not true. He was present at the opening of the reichstag, and has stayed at the schloss in the friendliest intercourse with his brother.

AROUND THE WORLD IN 88 DAYS.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 10.-[Special.[-Captain Edward, of the sailing vessel Moel Y.
Don, now taking on a cargo of phosphate rock at Port Royal, this state, gives a wonderful statement of the accomplishment of his bark in sailing around the world in eighty-eight days during his last voyage.

The log of the vessel substantiates the captain's statement, and he is ready to satisfy any one doubting him. The twenty-eighth day after leaving London, bound for Wellington New Zealand, the Moel Y. Don was in thirty four west longitude. Then sailing last to that port, she arrived and cleared for Diamond island, British Burmah, instead of taking the route always followed, which is northwest around the continent of Australia, and trusting to uncertain winds, Captain Edwards determined to sail east, being able to depend on the strong westeast, being anote to depend on the state of the erly winds prevailing in the latitude, and he reached thirty-four west longitude having been but eighty-eight days under sail for 17,000 miles. The bark averaged 2461 miles per day, proving her remarkable sailing qual-

THE FIRST-PRIZE NEGRO

Who Captured the Boylston Oratorical Prize.

Boston, May 10.—[Special.]—William Edward Burghardt Du Bois, the negro Harvard student, who captured the first prize in the Boylston oratorial contest is twenty-six years old, and a member of the class graduating next at Fiske university in Tennessee. His means were limited, and he has worked his way through the four years of his university life. He is especially gifted in the line of oratory, and won a prize previously. With his negro classmate, Clement Garret Morgan, of Washington, D. C., he gave lectures last summer at several of the summer resorts, and he and Morgan are fast friends, but they do not live with the other students, or near the college grounds, but with friends of their own race in Cambridgeport. Morgan was last fall elected orator of the graduating class, and will deliver his oration on class-day before the usual aristocratic audience in Sau ders's theater. Like Morgan, young DuBois will study law, and put out his shingle som where south of Mason and Dixon's line.

A CYCLONE IN OHIO.

Over One Hundred Buildings in Akron De stroyed. CLEVELAND, O., May 10.—A Leader special from Akron, O., says: At 5:30 this evening, in the midst of a most terrific cloud-burst, this city was struck of a most terrific cloud-burst, this city was struck by the worst tornado, beyond comparison, which has ever been known hereabouts, and excepting, perhaps, the Sharon cyclone of just a month ago. The storm struck the southern part of the city and tore through the fifth, fourth and second wards, doing damage which cannot be estimated at this writing, but fully one hundred buildings are completely demol-ished. Hundreds more are badly damaged.

Burckhardt's brewery was wreeked. Gibb's pottery, a brick block 150x60 feet in size, was leveled to (the earth. A good many people were injured, two or three supposed fatally, but nobody killed outright. One man is missing and cannot killed outright. One;man is missing and cannot be accounted for. No estimate of the money loss can yet be made. All descriptions of the storm show that it was rotary in its motion and this is shown by the skewing of buildings it struck and the twisting of big trees in its path. The track was between fifty and one hundred and fifty feet wide.

Two Youthful Murderers.

Columbia, S. C., iMay 10.—[Special.]—Josey Jones and Arnustil Jones, two negro boys and brothers, aged thirteen and fifteen years, were convicted in Orangeburg yesterday of the murder of their step-mother last December. The murder was deliberately planned and horribly executed. The boys had quarreled with their step-mother, and considering themselves ill-used, determined to put her out of the way. The eldest procured a loaded gun, and the two stationed themselves near the spring where they knew their step-mother would soon come for water. She soon came and was shot in the head. The young fiends then beat her brains out with the gun and left her where she had fallen. They afterward confessed to the crime. They were both sentenced to be hanged, but the youngest has been recommended to mercy, and this will probably cause the governor to commute the sentence. Two Youthful Murderers

The Work of an Incendiary. DURHAM, N. C., May 10.-[Special.]-The storage ware-house of leaf tobacco and general merchan-dise belonging to E. C. and J. W. Murray, at Vincent, Alamance county, N. Southgate & Son, at Durham, on the building in the North Carolina Home Insurance company, for $3,000, and on stock for $1,000 in the Hartford. As there had been no fire in the building, it is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

THE MEETINGS AT ST. LOUIS AND FORT WORTH.

DEACONESSES FOR THE METHODISTS.

A Resolution for Their Appointment Introduced in the Conference—The Baptist Association at Fort Worth.

St. Louis, Mo., May 10.-In the fourth day's session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church south, Bishop Hargrave presided. Bishop Galloway, who had been a fraternal delegate to the conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Canada, made a report of his visit to the conference. The bishop was cordially received, and the resolutions expressing good feeling for the southern Methodists were adopted.

The standing committee on missions reported adversely on the memorial from Virginia to so amend the constitution of the board ginia to so amend the constitution of the board of missions to provide for the sustentation fund. The ground of the adverse report was that the object of the memorial had been accomplished.

The committee on itineracy reported adversely on the memorial of J. E. Mann and W. R. Oaxdell to change the discipline that traveling preachers might be ordained after two years' probation, instead of three years, as at present. The report was adopted.

A delegate from Mississippi introduced memorials for the appointment of a deaconess in connection with the work of the board of missions, Referred. Though there has been and still is a strong sentiment in the church against the admission of women to preach, the women have for a long time been engaged in missionary work. A woman is at the head of an important branch of this work, and it is believed that the authorization of an order of doaconesses will be agreed to.

has been hampered very seriously by a lack of residences for pastors sent to new stations in the west. The woman's auxiliary of the board of missions, of which Miss Lucinda B. Helm is secretary, has the work of providing such parsomages in its charge. This morning Miss Helm issued a strong and argent appeal to the women of the church to take speedy hold of this matter and provide means for the building or otherwise furnishing residences for preachers and their families.

A resolution was offered by the Louisiana delegation condemning lotteries, and particularly one now seeking a renewal of franchise in Louisiana. The resolution extends the sympathy of the conference to the good people of that state in their effort to defeat the scheme of the lottery company. The resolution was,

Dr. Whitehead, of Virginia, opposed the resolution. "We are in great danger of violating the fundamental principles of the church.
We have no right, under the law and constitution of the church of Jesus Christ, to take any position in regard to civil laws. While I am as firm in my belief of temperance as any

Mr. Philpot, of Texas, called attention to the fact that the resolution on lotteries, which had been adopted without opposition, was open to the same objection. The matter of the resolution was not wholly legal, but was a moral question.

The resolution was then referred to the committee on temperance.

A resolution calling for the discontinuance of Sunday mails was referred to the committee on the Sabbath. A number of other resolutions, memorials etc., were offered and appropriately referred.

The chair appointed the following committee on fraternal correspondence: S.H. Jones, South Carolina; W. B. Murray, north Mississippi; C. W. Carter, of Louisiana; H. W. Lightfoot, of north Texas, and W. J. Sandford of Alabama. ford, of Alabama. Adjourned 'till Monday morning.

Attorney-General Earle Access the Great Reformer on the Stump.

Anderson, S. C., May 10.—[Special.]—This was the great Tillman day at Anderson courthouse, and his adherents had anticipated a glorious triumph for their pet. Predictions were made that five thousand people would gather from all sections of the county to hear Captain Tillman speak, but scarcely eight hundred materialized.

Captain Tillman, unexpectedly, made a rather lame speech, with remarkably few charges of corruption in the state government, and used very few harsh terms.

In reply, Attorney-General Earle made a scathing speech, in which he demied all the charges made by Captain Tillman as to corruption. During his speech he said that he feared that Tillmanism would culminate in Mahoneism or something of the kind.

This brought Captain Tillman to his feet, and for a few moments it seemed as if a clash would ensue.

A Detective Kills a Man and His Wife in a Fight.

Rochester, N. Y., May 10.—Thomas Lynch, one of the Rochester detective force, and a man named Samuel Stoddard, had a dispute over a line board fence yesterday. This afternoon the dispute culminated in a bloody tragedy. The detective shot and killed Stoddard and his wife. Lynch gave himself up and is now detained at police headquarters.

The fence which caused the fatal dispute was built a few days ago. It was placed on the lower end of Lynch's yard and passed within a few inches of Stoddard's house. Thursday night the latter chopped down a part of the fence and this afternoon he sawed away another portion. Lynch had attempted to get a warrant for the man's arrest, but was told by the police justice to eatch Stoddard in the offense and bring him to the station. This afternoon while Stoddard was cutting down the sence Lynch and his son went out to him. The detective carried a revolver and a pair of hand-cuffs. He had some words with. Stoddard, who struck at him with the saw. Lynch fired, but missed the man and killed his wife, who stood in the doorway. He shet again and killed the man. He walked quietly to police headquarters and surrendered. He said the man and woman attacked him fiercely, and he shot to save his own life.

CHILTON COUNTY, Ala, May 10.—[Special.]—
A man in this settlement moved his corn today to kill the rats that were in it. They had wasted so much corn, and were still wasting it, that he said he could not stand that; so he sent the boya over to his brother's house to get him and has family and all the cats and dogs they had, and in a little while they had congregated and began to move the corn and kill the rats. So it went, moving and killing, on and on, moving and killing, till they had killed 134 rats, and let several get in holes, under stumps, in the house-tops, in the fields, and scattered all over the woods, and it was not a good day for rats, either. One of the boys told me that while they were killing what few they did kill, there were just enough under the corn to raise the corn when they would breathe.

Real Estate in Atlanta.

The magnitude of operations in Atlanta real estate, and the swiftness with which they follow each other, are enough to make us stop and think.

There is in cities a legitimate growth of real estate and a consequent movement that is legitimate, and at times there are unwarranted operations of great magnitude, artfully worked up and skillfully manipulated by schemers, without the basis of growth or development. Which of these now agitates Atlanta and makes her granite base to tremble with energy? This is the only question that need give us concern.

If the heavy transactions that occur day by day have no proper foundation, or if they are out of proportion to growth and development, it is time to call a halt. But if this movement is the natural result of growth. and the inevitable outcome of the struggle by new population for a foot-hold in business and a place to lay its head when the day's work is done, then all is well.

Atlanta has never been a boom town and has never taken kindly to methods of boomers. We have seen her gird herself as a strong man to run a race; we have felt the thrill of her bounding pulse, and we have been jarred by the throb of tremendous energy, but we have never seen her leap at the thrust of a wayward spur or gallop at the goading of those who were drunk with excitement. She has a gait of her own, sometimes quiet and majestic, sometimes bounding beyond anticipation, but always forward, safely and

And now we do not propose to change our gait. Then let us look at Atlanta squarely and see what she is doing.

'Ve may sit down and think over the mater in as conservative a mood as we please, and we will get up enthusiastic. The simple truth is that the movement we see is the natural result of growth. Prices are lower in Atlanta than elsewhere. They are sustained by their earning power of property, and that is based upon the demands of the population. Atlanta is continually overgrowing her limits. Last fall she burst through the corporation line and got an extension of a quarter of a mile, and already she has overflowed beyond the new limits. Nine hundred houses were built last year, and they are all full. Four hundred have been built since the first of January, and they are full. Fifteen hundred will go up within the year, and when the New Year opens they will be full Aiready the houses in process of erection are practically filled in advance, and there is a demand for hundreds more. The real estate movement in Atlanta simply means that people want places-places to do business, or places to live. The newcomers are contending with the old residents for the soil, and the man who has the most money gets the ground.

Let no one imagine from this that there is a mad rush after property at any price. If a man wants a home and the owner of the ground asks him too much, he quietly goes farther out into the suburbs. Rapid transit is everywhere and going beyond. So the people and the town are spreading over the county. That is Atlanta's way. She will have elbow room. And all those cities that are crowding the center will do well to take pattern by Atlanta's expansive policy.

It is only necessary to add a word more for the consideration of everybody-that payday is sure to come. If every transaction is made with due regard to this simple fact, every man will be safe. Atlanta dirt of itself never hurt anybody.

McKinley Comes High.

Our farmers are outrageously robbed under the present tariff, without being called upon to submit to the further exactions proposed by Mr. McKinley.

What makes the burden all the harder to bear is the fact that our manufacturers charge Americans high prices, and sell the sam goods to foreigners much cheaper. The New York Herald says:

Under the present tariff and before we get to fekinley prices, American axes cost American itizens $7.76 per dozen, but the same axes are sold citizens $7.76 per dozen, but the same axes are sol by the same American manufacturers to foreign ers for $6.75 per dozen. A plough for which the American farmer is charged by the American manafacturer $11, is sold to foreigners by the same manufacturer for $8.40. A plough for which the American manufacturer charges his fellow-citizen, the American farmer, $5.60, the same manufacturer : oils to a foreigner for $5.04. For a gang-plough the American manufacturer charges the American farmer $58.80, but he charges the for-eigner only $52.92. For a dozen shovels the Amer-toan manufacturer. ican manufacturer charges his fellow-citizens 19.20, but he lets the foreigner have them for $7.80

Now, all this is under the present tariff. It looks pretty black, but Mr. McKinley is at satisfied. He proposes to make prices still higher for American farmers, while forers will continue to buy at low figures.

The Herald says of the duty on copper: The copper lords having got in 1861 so heavy a duty on foreign copper ores as to exclude these entirely, and thus give them a monopoly of the celebrated "home market," have for many pears sold the surplus copper 'u Europe a cent or two per pound cheaper than they would sell it to Americans, to the great injury of American cop-per-workers and the depression of the mages of this large class of mechanics.

A Negro Land Company.

One of the many interesting articles that crowd the columns of THE CONSTITUTION this morning gives an account of the organ ization of the "Georgia Real Estate, Loan and Trust Company," by leading colored men of Atlanta. This is one of the best signs of the times.

It is a pleasing thing to know that the colored people of Georgia, like their white friends, are leading the south. In Atlanta last Friday night they organized the first negro land company in the state, and probably the first in the south. For aught we know it is the first in the world.

There in that unpretentious shoe-shop a dozen negroes did what will prabably mark an era in the progress of their race, not that this is the first time colored men have in vested in real estate, for hundreds of them all over the state have done so and prospered in it. In the larger towns and cities their real estate has grown on their hands and made them rich, and in the country districts they have gotton them happy homes and fertile farms whereon plenty smiled and the earth poured forth her fatness. But this is the first time, so far as we know, that the negroes have gone into real estate and loans as a business. The Georgia Real Estate, Loan and Trust company will tend, as the Capital City Loan company did, to develope into a bank.

Now think of the negroes inaugurating a banking business, or if you please a loan business. Consider what this means. The men who a quarter of a century ago emerged from bondage into freedom, without property or education, and suddenly deprived of the protection and support of their former masters, now meet in a place of busines owned by one of their number and organize a business which is generally supposed to be controlled exclusively by capitalists. This simple, but pregnant statement shows what the negro is doing in Georgia, and what his opportunities are here; and the pleasure with which this news is received by his white friends gives new evidence of their good will and their sympathy with every movement for his real good.

Atlanta's Banking Capital.

In another column will be found a significant and suggestive article on Atlanta's

Only five years ago our banking capital was $850,000. Today it is over $2,500,000! This rapid and heavy increase is an unmistakable sign of the city's steady and substantial growth. An addition of $1,700,000 to our banking capital in five years shows that our volume of business has swelled to tremendous proportions.

The other figures in the article furnish food for thought. Five years ago our surplus was $350,000. Now, it is $800,000, an increase of $450,000. The loan and discount total has jumped from $2,400,000 to $6,700,000. The deposits have increased from $2,000,000 to $6,000,000.

These figures are worth studying. To a business man they speak volumes.

The fact should be borne in mind that these statistics relate only to the regular banks, independent of the capital controlled by the various building and loan associations of the city.

The Development of Ramie Culture. Atlanta always manages to come to the front in one way or another.

We have alluded in these columns, on various occasions, to the process of decortication discovered and developed by Mr. Walter J. Forbes, of this city. This process applies to every variety of fibre-producing plants, and is so complete, so cheap and so rapid that it has attracted considerable attention throughout the country.

A ramie fiber company has just been formed in New Orleans with a capital of three hundred thousand dollars. This company has for its president Captain Henry Willett, whose hobby has been for many years the cultivation of ramie. He has been growing the plant and waiting for a cheap method of decortication. He has found th method in Mr. Forbes's process, and he has accepted the position of president of the new company. Captain Willett has now six million ramie plants growing on his plantation, and seed enough for a hundred million more.

Mr. Forbes is vice-president of the com pany, Mr. Fred Struby is general manager and treasurer, and Major E. D. Willett, well-known citizen of New Orleans, is secretary. The company is made up of some of est known business men of New Orleans and it will go to work at once in the direc tion of developing the ramie interests of the south. Georgia will occupy a prominent place in the programme of the company. Mr. Forbes has made arrangements whereby he will be able after awhile to supply ramie seed to farmers in this state who desire to engage in ramie culture. The fact that the plant will flourish here, even in the northern part of the state, has been demonstrated long ago by the experiments of the late Colonel Richard Peters, of Atlanta, and there is no doubt that its culture can be made profitable in connection with Mr. Forbes's process of getting the fiber. In New Orleans Mr. Forbes met General L. Sewell, who is the agent of the Mexican Ramie company. The company is composed of General Porfirio Diaz, president of the republic, General Pacheco, minister of the interior, Senor Rubio, minister of finance, and eminent bankers of Mexico. Genera Sewell made arrangements for the use of the Forbes process by the Mexican Ramie company, and he is of the opinion that the employment of this process will lead to great results, not only in Mexico, but in the Central and South American states.

Concerning Two Lovers.

Our esteemed correspondents are still asking questions about Miss Winnie Davis and her lover. Nothing is more natural than this lively interest-this warm-hearted sympathy and affectionate curiosity.

All the world loves a lover, said one poet. Love rules the court, the camp, the field, said another.

When the Daughter of the Confederacy when the Daughter of the Confederacy weds a northern lover the agitators who delight in sectional strife will feet that they have met with an overwhelming answer. This winsome woman, the child of the prisoner of Fortress Monroe—this girl who was literally rocked in the cradle of war, and who first saw the light in the con capital, has said with an eloquence all her own that there shall be no north and no south, but in their place there shall be a union of love and perpetual peace.

Something has been said about the politics of the grandfather of Miss Winnie's sweet-Who cares anything about his politics? Miss Davis and M. Wilkinson are not preparing for a political campaign. They are not discussing matters of ancient history. They are not flaunting the stars and bars against the stars and stripes, and at the present moment they do not care a snap whether the nation is spelled with a big "N" or not.

Love will have its own sweet way, and even the malignant politicians are secretly glad of it. They are only malignant on the surface. At least they are good fellows, and they are rejoicing over the happiness of this young couple, and getting ready to dance at their wedding.

And a royal wedding it will be. The old Confederacy proposes to be on deck when the matter of bridal presents comes up-she will see to it that her favorite daughter is not

Our esteemed correspondents who are asking so many questions may as well put it down as a fact that there is not only a new south and a new north, but a new republic, too. This is as it should be.

Atlanta's Elephant Fund.

It will be observed that the interest in the Elephant fund is growing. The youngsters of Atlanta are beginning to bestir themselves, and when all the active ones get to work a great showing will be made.

The older people are also beginning to take an interest in the matter, and there is not a citizen of the town but stands ready to contribute whenever he is called.

We present elsewhere a letter from Mr. George T. G. White, the southern manager of the Equitable Insurance company, to which we invite attention. Mr. White, appreciating the purposes for which the Elephant fund is to be raised, sends his check for $50, and he makes his contribution more important by the wholesome letter in which it is conveyed.

Mr. White is not a citizen of Atlanta, but he takes great interest in the town and everything that pertains to its development. It is to be observed that Mr. White does not subscribe for himself, but on behalf of the little children who may not be able to contribute to the Elephant fund. In the name of the boys and girls of Atlanta THE CONSTITUTION thanks Mr. White.

Now, then, there are several reasons why the boys and girls should get to work in earnest.

In the first place, they are to have an elephant-a genuine elephant-at the park. In the second place, Mr. A. W. Dozier, he artist, has offered to give as a prize a magnificent crayen portrait, worth $15, to the girl or boy who gets up the largest list of subscriptions.

In the third place, a citizen who does not desire his name to be given, will give an appropriate present to the girl who brings in the largest list of subscriptions.

The Elephant fund ought to outgrow expectation during the coming week.

where this queer jargon is employed, and of the people who employ it. The specimens given are taken, we believe, from one of Mr. Howells's recent stories, and the allusion to Charlottesburg is presumably intended to convey the idea that the jargon is used by Virginians. It is a very amusing exhibition, to say the least of it.

The most interesting thing about it is the fact that Mr. Howells, who is said to be truly great in the art of handling and grouping trifles and trivialities, should make such a laughable failure when it comes to reporting peculiarities of speech. There has been a time when over sensitive Virginians would swell with indignation over such a caricature of their talk and pronunciation, but that time is long since past. Now they will laugh at the spectacle Mr. Howells makes of

We need not, of course, inform our correspondent that Virginians do not talk as Mr. Howells has reported them. The peculiarities in the speech of a cultured Virginian are not greatly different from those of the cultured Bostonian-though it is possible that the Virginian, living under more conservative social conditions, has preserved omething of the colonial twang.

Mr. Howells's specimens approach nearer to Volapuk than to American speech. He has evidently bestowed great pains on his efforts, but his ear lacks sensibility. His eye is keen enough, and his literary art may be said to be exquisitely fine when he is describing with tragic earnestness the style in which one of his heroines does up her back hair in the gloom and solitude of her own room, holding her hair-pins in her mouth, or the way in which she flirts her dress and hitches up her bustle at she gets off a street car—and so forth, and so on. In this business, Mr. Howells is truly great, but when it comes to the peculiarities of southn speech, he is very much at sea. failure is even more lamentable than the attempt of northern writers who try to phonetically reproduce the negro dialect.

The scene is laid in the famous city of Luneburg, about the middle of the fifteenth century during the reign of Frederick III., and the story of the great struggle between the wealthy burghers and the grasping Lord of the Land is most graphi-cally related. The book overflows with quaint and fascinating descriptions of the manners and toms of the mediæval city of the Coopers a customs of the mediaval city of the Coopers and and Vitners and Furriers and Shoemakers Guilds; and through the whole run the silver and golden threads of a double romance. Away last September he received a letter from Frank George Carpenter, the correspondent whose letters from the orient have had such a wide circulation in the newspapers and magazines for a year or so. No one ever heard of the letter until yesterday, when a chance mention of Mr. Carpenter's name caused Mr. Harris to remark that he had the gentleman's address if any one wished it. The very earth seemed to be in a feyer. But both were plucky either would back out.

The friends of Mr. Clark Howell Jr. on the executive committee, inaugurated the movement, the members of the committee signing the request for the call with a view of ordering an early primary. Mr. Howell's race for the speakership of the next house of representatives induced his friends to ask that the mary for this county be set for an earlier date than usual, in order that he can more consist ently and more earnestly prosecute his race for speaker after the question of his election has been definitely settled at home.

Of the members signing the above call, all expressed themselves as being in favor of granting an early primary, and it is probable that the committee will make such a call at its meeting tomorrow. If so, the local contest will be long enough to

SPRING SONG I love you. I know it Because the birds sing Gladlier this spring time Than last time o' spring; The breath of the lilac That blooms at my door Is sweeter and subtler Than ever before; The breezes are softer That come from the dell, The grasses are greener; That earpet the fell. The roses are redder. The violets are bluer, The white of the Hly More virginly pure; The pansy more royal, The buttercup more yell

The sunset more gorgeous. By the green world around you, the blue skies I love you, I love you, I love you, I love you.

You love me. I know it Because in your sight
The sun might go out
And I would not lack light. And even if it were to,
I could feel my way to your Warm heart in the dark. You love me. I know it Because in my breast In your absence there dwells Which tho' today piercing Exquisitely keen, I would not exchange For the crown of a queen, The bay of a Sappho,
The robe of a dean,
Nor for all the rais'd splendors
The oceans between.

A plank in the platform of the association also makes it obligatory upon members not to patronize wholesale dealers who sell to retail consumers at wholesale prices.

It was not designed to protest against wholesale dealers carrying on a retail trade also, but simply the selling by wholesale men to their friends and others of small lots at the same rates charged the grocer in wholesale lots. Previous to the organization of the association there was a great deal of this done, but now the majority of the wholesale houses have bound themselves by agreement not to sell retail lots at less than the retail market rate. When organized, the association had as its officers C. J. Kamper, president, Robert

Since the Grocers' association came to the front the dead-beats have been pushed close to the wall. They have been almost routed and run from the field. Lithonia on a Boom.

Macting Mr. R. H. Tambatic the other day we asked him about the big boom at Lithonia: Well, sir, said he. I don't know that Lithonia is on any boom specially, but the fact is that Lithonia is the most important business point on the Georgia railroad between Atlanta and Augusta. It is only twenty-five miles east of Atlanta on the Georgia railroad, but it is the central market and business place of a large, thickly settled and exceedingly prosperous farming and manufacturing territory. Socially it is refined and high-toned; its church and educational facilities are unsurpassed; the merchants do a large and thriving business which so increasing every day; everybody is busy as can be. You can't find one idle man in town, nor an idle horse or vehicle of any kind, and there is not a vacant house, be it cabin or mansion, in or near the town. In fact there is great demand right now for hundreds of houses.

Its fine granite, sufficient in abundance to supply the markets of the country for ages, has the reputation of being the best in the United States, and is largely in demand over all other granite, as the continually large and increasing shipment to the cities of the north and west will verify. I am not positive, but I think the daily shipment right now runs from forty to sixty car-loads. Large numbers of Englishmen, Scotchmen, Frenchmen, Irishmen, Welshmen and other foreigners, together with all the native force that can be obtained, are employed in developing the quarries and carrying on this immense granite business. Well, now you can readily see how these parties must have homes, be fed, clothed and supplied with the comforts of life like the other people. So you see the great need of houses, stores, shops, etc., to properly provide for them. Yet property is very cheap, and the only thing needed is to get men who have money interested in building houses for these people. Why, do you know, if you don't I do, that money invested in Lithonia will pay much better than in Atlanta. I mean especially last of this month of some zoof case. So you can look out for the advertisement. W.M. Scott & Co. will have charge of it, and I would like to see a large number from Atlanta go down and mak some solid investments. I can show them jus what has been done and what is being done, and am sure that it cannot be beaten.

THE EJECTMENT LEE HAD AGAINST Clarke was lost Tuesday, Clarke won the case, be it remembered in the year 1884. May 15th Clarke filed an injunction against Lee and the court enjoined Lee. Since that Lee sold trees off the lot and sold the lot, which violated the order of court. Nothing has been done with him. He tried to sell the lot to Mr. Abe Fry. Mr. Fry heard of the particulars and would not buy it. The record shows that Tun Lee was successful in selling the lot to Nelson Lee for $250.

THE PAST WEEK' IN SOCIETY'S DOMAIN.

What Has Been Going on in Atlanta.

THE WEEK'S ENTERTAINMENTS

With Gossip About Atlanta People and Their Friends-Other Society News.

In a social way the past week has been marked by a number of pretty affairs, beginning on Tues-day with the Courtney reception, which still re-ceives enthusiastic mention, followed on Wednes-day by the Misses Hammonds' "At Home"—a de-lightful affair. Thursday evening the cotillion at the Post was largely attended by guests from the city, who, judging from their glowing accounts, must have had indeed a glorious time. The rest of the week has been taken up with of the week has been taken up with drives. In Atlanta everyone owns some kind of vehicle, and in no city of ite size can be found handsomer teams. From the tally-ho, with its load of merry passengers, to the diminutive cart and donkey and small occupants, every one drives. The driving park has been greatly improved and beautified, and most people prefer to drive here where are combined the charms of both city and country.

The interest and enjoyment in the Gate City Fennis club is manifest every afternoon, when a score or more of members and as many of their friends may be found at the club grounds in Peters park. To the casual spectator the sight is a very pretty one, the quickly moving figures in their gay costumes, the bright pennants fluttering in the breezes and the crowd of interested persons on the adjoining hillside watching the progress of the game and applauding each skillful play. Of all the forms of physical exercise, in the disguise of amusements, this is with reason the most of amusements, this is with reason the most popular, and undoubtedly the game of lawn tennis has come to stay. Each season brings something new in the way of serves, or modifications of arbitrary rules, so that the player of several years find that in which to be interested as finds that in which to be interested, as well as the novice to whom the points of the game are unexplained mysteries.

A superbly handsome lawn decoration is the A superby handsome awn decoration is the magnificent bronze vase which adorns Mrs. Dr. Ridley's handsome place. The design is that of an urn, whose handles are rolled and curved in many ways, and covered with a raised design of graceful pattern. Filled with rare clinging vines and flow-ers, it makes an unusually handsome and strik-ing ornament, well in keeping with the stately mansion it adorns.

With the growth into favor for hot baths as a remedy for almost every ill to which all flesh is heir, comes the consequent demand for skilled nurses, or "messeurs," as they prefer to be called. While there are a number of good places to obtain these baths, heretofore Atlanta has had no professional messeur who would go to one's own home, an arrangement by which often much time could be saved, as well as having more par-tleular attention given one. A clever, bright little English woman, Miss Annie Philpott, well known to persons who receive treatment at Dr. Robert-on's sanitarium on Capitol avenue, has decided to jopen rooms of aer own, and will thus be prepared to treat pertons desiring it, at their homes. Having her own imall hand-battery, and all other needful applithees, she will be able to give almost any kind of path, and being thoroughly experienced in the massage treatment and the use of oil, will give ent in these. For ten days she will be found at Dr. Robertson's.

Among the favorite resorts for Atlanta people, Cumberland seems to hold out more attractions this season than ever before. A number of society people will leave in a few days for a sojourn of several weeks.

Miss Daisy Johnson, of the barracks, gave a delightful party last evening at the Ballard school in honor of her birthday. The parlors were prettily decorated in roses and daisies and filled with many guests, a number of her barracks friends in addition to the schoolmates and friends with whom she has been intimately associated the past year. The evening was spent in dancing, and after-the delicious supper some figures of the german followed. Mr. and Mrs. Greenough, Captain Greenough and Miss Nellie Nalle assisted Miss Johnson in receiving.

The reception at Fort McPherson on Thursday was a very brilliant and enjoyable affair. The hall was handsomely and appropriately decorated in bunting and flags in the national colors, making an effective back-ground for the handsome gowns of the ladies, and the officers' uniforms. Many Atlanta people were present, and it was an affair of great interest.

An Atlanta Boy in Vienna, Austria.

An Atlanta Boy in Vienna, Austria.

Some years ago a young man was taken into the employ of Messrs. Chamberlin & Johnson, of this city, to serve three years for a business training. He proved to be faithful and trust worthy, and during the time of his service he conceived a passion for the study of medicine and surgery and would read at night and at spare times literature of this kind.

As his reading continued on this line the passion grew and at the expiration of his term of service with Messrs. Chamberlin & Johnson he entered exclusively the study of medicine and surgery and attending medical lectures.

His ambition knew no bounds and his thirst for knowledge of the treatment of diseases by medical remedies and surgical methods was such that his former employers and friends encouraged him and his professors gave him warm co-operation, and, at the conferring of degrees and avarding diplomas to his class, he received the first honor, although he was by far the youngest man in his class of fifty-two who graduated when he did, early in March, at the Atlanta Medical College.

The young man is Dr. Don B. Bosworth, son of Dr. Joe M. Bosworth, of Americus, Ga., under whose methodical care Don is said to have been trained for graduation, and also his expected studies in Europe.

There is no use for any boy who has formed and sustained a good character, to fret and pine over a poor beginning or discouraging prospects. If his day-time must be spent at work (a glorious necessity) his nights and spare times may be utilized with books, gaining useful knowledge, and Young Dr. Bosworth is taking general lectures, studying general surgery and particularly diseases of the eye, ear and throat, as also the German language and the methods of the German physicians and surgeons in the treatment of disease. His address is Dr. D. B. Bosworth. Warhing Albachgase 4, Th. 14, Vienna, Austria, and he is anxious to have letters from his old friends and acquaintances, being lonesome in a strange country.

Dr. Bosworth had his last literary schooling in

high letters of character and trustworthiness from

Dr. H. W. M. Miller, Dr. Hunter P. Cooper, Chamberlin, Johnson & Co., and from several prominent medical men and surgeons in New York city, to whom he was introduced by promiment professional men of this city, introducing him to persons

CHARLES N. KIGHT, A. G. P. A. Atlanta, Ga. ALFRED WILKINSON.

HE CAPTURES THE DAUGHTER OF THE CONFEDERACY.

Winnie Davis's Betrothed-A State Rights Democrat, as His Father and Grandfather Were.

"That's his picture, is it?"
"That's—yes, I know hers."
"He aint so bad." "He'll sorter do."

"Yes, that's a good face." A group of ex-confederate soldiers were standing in the business office of The Consti-TUTION yesterday, examining with great interest a couple of photographs.

One was a picture of Miss Winnie Davis. The other was that of a young man, between twenty-five and thirty, with as pleasant and handsome a face as one meets nowadays. The young man, whose picture is given be-low, is Mr. Alfred Wilkinson, of Syracuse, N. Y., to whom Miss Davis is engaged.

"Look here, young man," remarked one of the group, addressing the picture of the young man, "we're going to keep an eye on you, and you've got to make her a good husband, or I'm going to know why. hear?'

"Why," put in another, "we'd get up a regiment down here and capture her back if he didn't."

"I'd go in that crowd-" "Me too! Me too!" was the echo. "I suppose," remarked another, "that every old soldier in the south feels like a godfather "And the women like godmothers. They had each a good look at the young man's picture, and there was something like a feeling of relief visible in their faces as the passed it around and finally handed it back over the counter. The verdict was a favorable one.

"They tell me, though," said one veteran rather dubiously, "that his grandfather was a terrible old abolitionist." "Don't make a bit of difference," said another one quickly. "My grandfather was an abolitionist, too."

"I think mine was, sorter," supplemented another. "I know my father was. Then, it don't make any difference what his grand-father was if he's all right. Just so he treats her right—that's all I care about."

This was evidently the accepted view, so far that crowd went. During the day the picture was shown to a umber of others, and it was curious to see the keen personal interest shown. Invariably, too, the verdict was favorable. The face was attractive, somehow or other, and inspired con

A STATES RIGHTS DEMOCRAT. Major Sidney Root, of Atlanta, is an intimate friend of the Davis family, but the major was surprised, like other folks, when the announcement was published.

"No," said he yesterday, in reply to the question, "I never saw the young man. I rely upon what Mrs. Davis says of him—that he is a states rights democrat, as his father and his grandfather were before him, and generally a very estimable young man.
"Miss Winnie met him for the first time, I believe, about three years ago, in Syracuse. The papers have published, I see, something of the circumstances under which the meeting took place. While she was in Syracuse a very foolish exhibition of hostility was shown by some people, and something like an attempt at ostra-cism was made. He very gallantly came to her rescue. I almost wish he hadn't-you know how girls are. I'm a yankee myself, born in Massachnsetts, but—oh, well, though It's her choice, and I'm sure she's one of the most sensible girls on earth. No doubt it's all

"Mr. Davis knew of the matter some time before his death, Mrs. Davis writes, and on more than one occasion invited him to visit Beauvoir.

"I have a sort of implicit confidence in his udgment, and if he approved it we ought to eel satisfied. He was, all things considered, the greatest man I ever saw. I have seen and known quite a number of great men, too, in this country and in Europe. He was the great

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The stock market today, during its half session, maintained a large volume of business, and 212,474 shares of listed stocks and 49,913 of unlisted stocks were traded in. The market, however, had a tired look, and prices sagged away during the greater part of the ession, although the general feeling is still very allish and the undertone remains strong, leaders are outspoken on the bull side, and the prevailing temper is decidedly so, while there is more trading for outside accounts than at any time since the rise began. The reactionists are not excluded with the concessions made during Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular. NEW YORK, May 10—[Special.]—A quiet market is reported from Liverpool with a steadier feeling in the more distant positions. An unfavorable report from Washington has been expected for some days past, and the market remained a wait-ing one until its appearance. The falling off is most marked in the Mississippi valley from the overflowed districts, although Texas is behind the usual average. Upon the Atlantic slope the planting is up to the average of past seasons. Uponfreceipt of the bureau report the feeling, after the close, became very firm, and prices were quoted 2@3 points above the official close, though little inclination was shown to trade. According to the Chronicle the crop in sight is now 7,044,039 bales, or 285,000 bales ahead of 1889 and 358,000 bales in excess of 1888. anead of 1889 and 305,000 bales in excess of 1889. A Land Company Organized by Leading Colored Men of Atlanta—The Capital $10,000 With $1,000 Down.

The first negro land company in Georgia, and probably the first in the south, was organized by leading colored men of Atlanta last Friday night in the shoe-shop of J. A. Schell.

The organizers include some of the substantial men of their race, and the transaction was conducted in a business-like way. Those present were: H. A. Rucker, A. Hamilton, B. H. ent were: H. A. Rueker, A. Hamilton, B. H.

Blackshear, J. D. Render and S. H. Jackson The election for temporary officers resulted in the choice of the following:

H. A. RUCKER-President. T. H. CRUMBLEY-Secretary. J. T. SCHELL-Treasurer.

The company begins with one hundred shares of stock, representing $10,000. Subscription books were opened at the time of organization, and ten per cent, or $1,000, was Immediately paid in, thus complying at the start with the law requiring ten per cent of the stock of a corporation to be paid in cash.

The committee on charter was instructed to roceed at once with their application. Pendne of a charter the affairs of the ompany will be managed, as usual in such interims, by a provisional board of directors.

Of the $10,000 capital stock $4,000 has al ready been subscribed and the company holds sixty shares, which will be placed on the market for the public. There is already an active demand for this stock and there is no doubt that every dollar will be taken. There are a number of wealthy colored men in Georgia and they would raise $50,000 if necessary to carry ou the enterprise.

"Our business," said president Rucker, "is to deal in real estate and make loans. It is, os the name describes it, a real estate, loan and trust company.

"The remaining shares are worth, of course $100 and will be sold for that. Of the $4,000 subscribed twenty-five per cent. has been paid The $6,000 of stock remaining will be taken by colored people. There is a demand for the stock this morning.

The new company will invest in Atlanta dirt, which has never failed to make money for any concern that handled it according to the plainest business principles. Mr. C. E. Pierson Objects to a Newspaper Story, and Will Sue for a Divorce

Mr. C. E. Pierson was in Atlanta yesterday, Mr. C. E. Pierson was in Atlanta yesterday, and was greatly exercised over the story about a whipping affray in which his former wife figured. The following, which appeared Thursday in the Chattanooga Times, gives Mr. Pierson's side of the case:
C. É. Pierson, whose wife assaulted Minnie Bowland at the postofice, on information given her, as she said, by a colored woman that Minnie Bowland had been living with her husband, was in Chattanooga vesterday.

her, as she said, by a colored woman that Minnie Bowland had been living with her husband, was in Chattanooga yesterday.

Mr. Pierson was at Atlanta Wednesday, and hearing of the difficulty at once returned to Chattanooga to contradict the story told by his wife.

Mr. Pierson has not been living with his wife for two years and never expects to again. He says his wife is traveling about in an effort to extort money from him; and he never invited her to come to Chattanooga and live with him.

He further says he cannot imagine who the woman, Minnie Bowland, is, or how her name came to be associated with his. As an effectual disproval of his wife's story, he submits the following declaration from the proprietors of the Delmonico hytel, where Mrs. Pierson asserted he had been keeping Minnie Bowland:

"In justice to Mr. C. E. Pierson, the undersigned, the proprietors of the Delmonico, was alone and had no female or other companion; that he never, at any time, paid the board of any boarder at this house, and that his conduct towards all the guests of the hotel was at all times that of a perfect gentleman; that we never heard or saw anything improper between him and any female stopping at the hotel.

"We make this statement to correct the erroneous publications and representations made against Mr. Pierson.

Mr. Pierson stated that the former article did him an injustice. He stated that he would begin proceedings today for an absolute divorce from his wife.

'ENGLISH VIEW" PASSES FROM CAPTAIN ENGLISH'S HANDS.

And Becomes the Property of Messrs. A. J. West & Co. and Their Asiociates— Fifty Acres for $00,000.

Some time ago Messrs. A. J. West & Co. obtained from Captain J. W. English an option on his beautiful suburban place, beginning near the junction of the two Peachtree streets, for the sum of $60,000, which resulted yesterday in these gentlemen and a few asso ciates buying the property. The cash was paid over to Captain English.

This is one of the most important deals yet made in real estate. The syndicate is a very strong one, two of its members being worth over a million dollars.

The gentlemen securing this valuable property are as follows: Mr. A. Z. Demarest, A. C. Ver Nooy and Dr. J. H. Law, New York; E. A. Cope lan, banker, Greensboro, Ga.; A. S. Seals, merchant, Greensboro, Ga.; Morris Brandon, W. H. Holcombe, W. C. Warner, A. J. West, W. L. Smith and H. F. West, Atlanta.

These gentlemen will organize under a charter owned by Mr. Brandon, under the name of the "Atlanta Land and Building Company," and proceed at once to capitalize same. While it is a splendid profit for Captain English, he having paid $1,200 for it some years ago, real estate prophets say it will, in the near future, bring three times the price now paid.

The property is as pretty as a picture, fronting 3,000 feet on Peachtree street, in full view of the capitol and First Methodist church, and is down in a solid sward of blue grass.

The distance from the Seltzer tract to this purchase is about half a mile. Estimating this 3,000 feet at half what that brought—say fifty dollars per front foot, these gentlemen will reap $150,000 for the frontage of their purchase, still leaving them half the land. Improvements are going on in Peachtree wards as fast as money and labor can carry them. The purchasers of this property feel that they have a splendid barain even at the price they paid for it.

The Masonic Temple Purchase Ratified.

The sale made by Messrs. A. J. West & Co. of the W. A. Moore property, to the Masonic temple committee, has been ratified, the price, as was first stated by THE CONSTITUTION, being $35,000.

An Institution Worthy of Home Support

We take much pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of THE FRANKLIN PUB-LISHING HOUSE, JAS. P. HARRISON & Co.,

This establishment, years ago, to meet the wants of our section, added to its large printing works the feature of electrotyping and stereo typing, which it has kept constantly in suc cessful operation, and from time to time en-

The work is unexcelled by that of any establishment in the union. It is simply the perfection of beauty and utility. The prices, too, are under the regular scale of the larger foundries of the west. A Cut in Prices.

Elsewhere will be seen the advertisement of the Excelsior Steam laundry, 47 Decatur street. They come to the front this morning with a cut in prices. Their price for collars is two cents; cuffs, four cents; shirts, ten cents, and all other laundry work in proportion. This will be quite a saving to the people who have been paying the old prices. These gentlemen do first-class work in every particular, and are amply prepared for the immense volume of trade they are now receiving. They make a specialty of laundrying ladies' white dresses, and, in fact, they are prepared to do all classes of laundry work at prices greatly reduced. How to Buy Cigars. Is it more profitable for a retail dealer in eigars to buy from the manufacturer than from the jobber? This is a vital question for every retailer Jonoer? This is a vital question for every retailer to consider.

We have saved our customers the jobber's prifit for the last six years. This accounts partly for the steady increase of the demand for our fine Havana cigars which equal in taste, flavor and Spanism workmanship the best imported from Cuba; and they give entire satisfaction, for Atlanta's prominent men have been our steady customers ever since we established our factory.

We sell to the retail trade at wholesale price in quantities of one box and upward. We guarantee our goods and ship them to any place in the country. And we are willing at any time to take the goods back and refund the money if they do not turn out to be as we represent them. The buyer runs, therefore, no risk at all.

There are many smokers who pay high prices for cigars which do not satisfy their tasze. Let them call at our factory and get their money's worth, or write to

THE CITY OF ROME IN GRAND OLD GEORGIA.

She Stands Upon Her Seven Hills a Giant of Wealth, Energy, Enterprise and Marvelous Development.

ROME, Ga., May 10.-[Special.]-I have been to Rome.

I have gazed upon her, a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

I have stood upon those hills and looked down upon the industrial giant slumbering in the beautiful valley, and as I watched the moving Hercules realized it was waking, and soon the whole country must tremble at its being; that it must rise to its giant height and cast its shadow upon every hand.

How prond were the ancients of Rome of old, and how has ber name been handed down in history and song? But that is a memory, and now I stand in the presence of the Rome of today, whose people glory in her being, whose name, too, will soon become famous, and the music from whose busy factories falls sweet upon the ear. Rome of old still lives in a sense, but the Rome that I am looking upon today is a strong and beautiful child, the inspiration from which is destined to send a thrill into the heart throbs of ages.

Who can paint this glorious scene? The God of nature has dipped his finger in the fountains of the far off hills, and with a flowing current of ages writes in lines of silver the story of Rome's future greatness. Look upon the city, a busy hive of fifteen thousand people, the curling smoke from forge and factory, Vulcan's offering to the genius of industry, wreathing the grand church spires; see the three great rivers, the Coosa, the Costanaula, and the Etowah, winding like silver roadways, "drawing their waters from the purple hills," with sinuous grace, kissing the foot of the hills, coiling through the graceful lines of the mountains, onward to sport in many a shoaly bed, or in silent currents to seek the ocean.

Go with me now down into the valley and let us see what we find in this busy and brilliant little city that is fast reaching a state when it will an pear a diadem in the crown of the great industrial south.

Rome is situated in the very heart of the great mineral belt of the south, and from all about her, from the bowels of those giant hills, is taken the majority of the brown ore that is used in the furnaces of Chattanoga and Birmingham. She has three rivers, the Coosa, the Coostanula and the Etowah, which give water transportation to the Gulf of Mexico, and are a most important factor in the control of freight rates. Upon these, two packet lines ply, both of which have their head-quarters here. Then, too, she has five railroads in operation, giving her communication with the outside world in every direction. These are the Georgia division of the E.T., V. and G., the Selma, Rome and Dalton, the Rome and Decatur, the Chattanoga, Rome and Columbus, and the Rome railroad. Besides these arteries of steel that send her pure blood throbbing into the outside world, she has two dummy lines and two horse car lines, which traverse her in every direction.

AS A MANUFACTURING POINT.

SEW ROME LAND COMPANY.

These last named concerns are all located in East Rome; and, by the way, are on the property of the.

NEW ROME LAND COMPANY, which owns 1,700 acres on this side of the town. On this property are also located the large exposition grounds, the lake and race track. This, I believe, is about the pretriest and most advantageously located property about the city and is indeed beautiful. It is traversed from end to end by three of the railroads above mentioned, and is crossed and re-crossed by the belt railroad, and Silver creek runs directly through it. You will agree with me that in this property the New Rome Land company has something that is valuable indeed. They own also 300 acres of land in West Rome adjacent to which are the principal industries mentioned above. The New Rome Land company, although recently organized, is one of the strongest in the country, having a capital of four million dollars. It is composed of some of the most responsible gent emen in the country, of whom the following are a sample: President—Dr. Captains S. H. Buck, of Alabama; vice-president—Dr. Captains S. H. Stevens, Alabama; C. H. Munger, Ohio; J. H. Allen, Rome.

The company has laid off this beautiful property into lots for manufacturing, business, and residence purposes, and proposes to have their first sale on May 14th, 15th and 16th, and 1 am very much of the opinion that here is one of the greatest opportunities to make good big money.
